CITY CONVENTION.

The Filley Republicans in Convention To-Day.

A Full City Ticket Nominated With Enthusiasm.

Clover, Rombauer and Frank for Circuit Judges--Vogel for Clerk--Mason for Sheriff.

Gottschalk for Judge of Probate Court, Withrow Criminal Court, Denison for Court of Criminal Correction--Full Report of Proceedings --Filley's Speech.

The Filleyites rallied in full force at Central Turner Hall this morning. It was the first time that the whole body in the city had been called together since the fight had been sprung upon them, and they made a great attempt to show up well.

The whole crowd were in attendance early and Chauncey I. Filley was on hand early, as well as his lieutenants, Peter P. Dailey and John Henry Pohlman. Among the other attendants were very few prominent Republicans, most of the men who are known from their position being conspicuous by their absence. The voting population was, however, well represented. Candidates were not as plenty as usual. Isaac M. Mason was the first of the list to show up, accompanied by his son Charlie. Then D. D. Fisher and Judge Denison put in an appearance and completed the list. Until the opening of the convention. The time was passed in good-natured jokes of all kinds, the term "hoodlum" being the favorite appellation among them as they met. The Republican City Central Committee prior to the organization of the Convention. Chauncey I. Filley occupied most of the session in advice to his colleagues.

HELD A MEETING

All the members declaerd that nothing of importance had been done, and at just 10:30 a. m. John H. Pohlman, chairman of the City Central Committee, called the convention to order and named Chauncey I. Filley as temporary chairman.

He said that it became his duty as temporary chairman to call to the chair Mr. Chauncey I. Filley, an announcement which was followed by uproarious applause. He added loudly, "I believe Mr. Filley is in the hall."

Somebody cried out by way of pleasantry, "Oh, no; Mr. Filley did not come down this morning. He is up home on Chestnut street."

Mr. Pohlman did not appreciate the humor of the remark and insisted that Mr. Filley was on hand. Mr. Filley's appearance upon the platform was the signal for a loud outburst of applause. When it had concluded

MR. FILLEY SAID:

"In accordance with the request of the City Committee I accept the duties devolving upon me and in behalf of the old guard of Republicans of the city of St. Louis, who, by regularly organized committees, have called this convention. I trust that the delegates present, duly elected at the primaries of last night, will appreciate fully the responsibility of their position and discharge faithfully the duties imposed upon them. Who are the Republican party of the city of St. Louis? They are the representatives of the laboring interest; of the men who have built up this city for miles out in all directions from the city. These men are the bone and sinew of society, the mudsills, and thank God I am one of them. [Applause.] I have been in the Republican party since its inception in this city. I have never faltered in my allegiance to it, and I do not propose to falter now. In 1862 the Democratic Rebels had this city and I was called to head a movement of the Radical Republican party in St. Louis, and we won a glorious Radical victory. The Republican party held the city until 1871. Then we lost it, and the Court-house and City Hall were filled up with Democrats. We worked hard for several years to reorganize the party, and in 1876 we had it perfected; and, to the amazement of all, we turned out three Republican Congressmen and scooped in a lot of the city officers."

The speaker recounted Republican successes since then, and defended the support of Overstolz as a dernier ressort when the party was in bad shape, which had resulted in strengthening it. This was a stepping-stone to future success, and when 1880 came the party made another sweep and in 1881 were prepared to go it alone, and they did. They elected the Mayor, and he is a good one, and a city ticket from top to bottom, which is a good one. Not one of them has committed an official error or cast any slur upon the Republicans who elected them. These victories the Republican party was ready to repeat, and this convention was prepared to elect a ticket worthy of the undivided support of all honest Republicans in the city. The speaker paid the Republican party a tribute and called upon the meeting to nominate a temporary secretary.

Peter P. Dailey named F. W. Mott and J. J. Smith for temporary secretaries and they were elected. Hugh Clark was elected Sergeant-at-Arms.

Senator Rodgers of the Eighteenth Ward moved the appointment of a Committee on Credentials and on order of business and permanent organization, which was carried.

The following committees were named by the several wards, in accordance with the resolution:

Twenty-seventh Ward—Michael Foerstel.
Twenty-eighth Ward—Nathan Barlow.

A recess was then taken to allow the committes time to make up their reports.

During the recess the delegates nearly all adjourned down stairs to the bar-room. Mr. Filley paced the convention hall and had little to say to anybody. Mr. Mason was doing a little quiet talking, but most of the candidates seem to be still absent. Jay L. Torrey's name was mentioned around by numbers of friends, and Mr. Fisher's claim for nomination as Circuit Judge was not neglected. There was not the usual rush and eagerness for nomination, however. Mr. Filley seemed to feel very well and remarked several times, "This is a pretty fair gathering, considering we are all hoodlums." A Globe-Democrat reporter attempted to interview Filley on the defalcation of the Maryville Postmaster, and he was only too eager to answer. "Yes," said Filley, "I have heard about him and I have nothing to do with him. Senator Vest telegraphed yesterday advising the selection of the man whom I recommended for the place. Oh, yes, I heard about the man at Maryville. I am too anxious to talk about him. Wait until the other man gets there."

AFTER RECESS.

The committees were out until 12:30 p. m. The Committee on Credentials got through in five minutes, as there were no contests. The trouble and delay was in the Committee on Resolutions. It was rumored that one or two members wanted to introduce a resolution to postpone nominations until some other day, which caused quite a flurry. Filley was sent for and was in the committee room some time. The object was said to be to prevent the springing of any such subject. At the hour mentioned above, Mr. Filley again rapped the convention to order and J. M. McGill read the report of the Committee on Credentials, which was adopted on motion of Dick Mollencott.

The Committee on Organization, Resolutions and Order of Business reported through Thomas P. Rogers, as follows: For

PERMANENT CHAIRMAN, HON. CHAUNCEY I. FILLEY;

Secretaries, Fred. W. Mott, August Gundelach; Vice-Presidents, Henry Schaegman, David McCarty, John Bircher, John Goldsmith, John H. Amelung, Frank Gutch, Adam Grund, Julius J. Schmitt, Henry Debies, Henry Bruckner, Paul Ehler, Chas. Stuckman, T. C. Martin, F. Siefker, E. McMundy, H. S. Benicke, C. M. Raleigh, Rev. A. J. Warner, W. F. Brockman, M. Bohle, John Fett, Jas. McGill, John Krause, Aug. Junge, Wm. Gartenbaugh, Jacob Thorp, Alex. S. Pilcher, Wm. Hammerstein; Sargeants-at-Arms, A. J. Davis, Hugh Clark, H. A. Scoville, John Gallagher, John Losch.

The committee recommended that nominations be made in the following order:

1. Three Circuit Judges.
2. A Circuit Clerk.
3. Sheriff.
4. Recorder of Deeds.
5. Judge of the Probate Court.
6. Judge of the Criminal Court.
7. Judge of the Court of Criminal Correction.
8. Clerk of the Criminal Court.
9. Clerk of the Court of Criminal Correction.
10. Prosecuting Attorney of the Court of Criminal Correction.
11. Assistant Prosecuting Attorney of the same court.
12. Coroner.

THE RESOLUTIONS WERE AS FOLLOWS:

Resolved, 1. That the Republican party of the city of St. Louis, in convention assembled, reaffirms the principles and annunciations of the National Republican platform of 1880.

2. That, education being one of the necessary adjuncts of citizenship, we proclaim the necessity of free and compulsory education.

3. That the equal and steady and complete enforcement of the laws and the protection of all our citizens in the enjoyment of all privileges and immunity guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States and of the State of Missouri are the first duties of the nation and of the State.

4. That the sense of the party and the country is opposed to sumptuary laws.

5. That civil and religious liberty is guaranteed by the laws of the land, and that we oppose the restriction of the rights of citizenship or the dictation through law of what a citizen may or may not eat or drink.

6. That we oppose Prohibition.

7. That the present laws are adequate to control the traffic in liquor if properly enforced, and we commend their enforcement.

8. That we recommend such sanitary regulations in the workshops and manufactories as shall protect the health and lives of the laborers.

9. That labor is the great producer and developer of the wealth of the country, and is entitled to respect, protection and honor at home, and from the competition of foreign pauper labor.

10. That the Administration of President Arthur has our unqualified indorsement.

11. That the successes of the Republicans of the city, whereby the victories of 1876, 1877, 1878, 1880 and 1881 were achieved and the Democrats invited to vacate their offices in the Court-house and City Hall, we propose to repeat in the coming election, and in doing so to command the voice and vote of the Republican party now as then.

12. That the records of the officers in the City Hall and Court-house elected by the Republicans demand and should command our fullest respect and confidence.

NOMINATION FOR CIRCUIT JUDGES

were then called for, and Peter Berger, of the Third Ward, put in nomination D. D. Fisher, saying that he was an able lawyer and a most industrious worker for the party's success. He stood at the bar to-day unequalled, with no stigma on his character. Mike Foerstel seconded the nomination.

Chris. Overbeck, of the Fifteenth Ward, put Jay L. Torrey in nomination, and dilated on his fitness for the position.

John H. Pohlman nominated Henry A. Clover, saying that he would make the finest Judge St. Louis ever had. Henry Ziegenhein seconded the nomination, saying that Mr. Clover was a good man and a "walking statute."

Mr. L. Methudy, of the Fifteenth Ward, put in nomination Nathan Frank, the nomination being seconded by Wm. Wilson.

Philip Stamm, of the Third Ward, nominated R. E. Rombauer, saying it was not necessary to eulogize him. The nomination was seconded by half a dozen wards.

Nominations then closed. The vote on the 18th ballot was announced as follows, the three candidates being balloted for at once: Clover, 118; Frank, 121; Rombauer, 132; Fisher, 20; Torrey, 39.

Messrs. Clover, Frank and Rombauer were declared nominated. The total number of votes cast was 143. The nominations were made unanimous.

This result was not as first cast, as before the ballot was announced changing began by the wholesale, the principal changes being from Fisher and going about equally to Rombauer, Clover and Frank. John H. Amelung, of the Fifth Ward, which has eight votes, tried to bunch the result and give Torrey thirteen votes to the neglect of some other candidate, amid shouts and laughter. Torrey also benefited by the changing.

The Chair called upon the Convention to proceed to the nomination of CIRCUIT CLERK.

Henry Ziegenhein placed in nomination Chas. F. Vogel, amid great shouting and acclamation. The nomination was seconded on all hands. Finally J. M. McGill, of the Twenty-third Ward, moved that the nomination be made right away.

Myer A. Rosenblatt moved to make the nomination of Vogel by acclamation, but Chairman Filley declared that was out of order. Every ward in the convention seconded the nomination. Several delegates tried to have the rules suspended and make the nominations by acclamation, but Filley rapped them down, and called for the ballot, which resulted in Vogel being nominated, receiving the whole 143 votes in the convention.

THE CANDIDATES FOR SHERIFF

were next called for.

Mr. Fred. W. Mott, of the Twenty-fourth Ward, placed in nomination Mr. I. M. Mason, whom he characterized as a man who had held the position with honor to himself and the party, and who, from the time he was Marshal of the city, had fought hard for the party, and no doubt this time he would double or treble his previous vote.

The nomination was seconded at all parts of the hall. No other candidate was mentioned.

Mr. Mason, like Mr. Vogel, was nominated with a whoop, receiving the unanimous vote of the convention.

Mr. Filley paused to remark that two unanimous renominations showed what confidence the people had in the hoodlums.

Mr. Mason was called for and made a few remarks, in which he returned thanks for the nomination and promised, if elected, to do his duty faithfully.

THE NOMINATION OF A RECORDER OF DEEDS

was the next thing on the reported order of business.

Mr. Ziegenhein placed in nomination Mr. Fred. Gerber, a young man who was well known in the city and whose forefathers were among the oldest citizens. He had already held offices with credit and will receive the full vote of the party and of many others who would have confidence in his administration.

Mr. Pete Dailey seconded the nomination and was followed by the spokesmen of each of the other wards.

The nominations closed with no other candidate and Gerber was nominated unanimously.

Mr. Filley—"Here's another honest expression for an earnest, hardworking, faithful young Republican."

THE PROBATE JUDGESHIP

was next taken up.

Mr. Peter Dailey, of the Twentieth Ward, nominated Mr. Louis Gottschalk, which was seconded by all the other wards. There was no other nomination and Mr. Gottschalk was chosen unanimously with an enthusasm which seemed to be growing contagious and to spread to the lobby.

FOR JUDGE OF THE CRIMINAL COURT,

the Nineteenth Ward put in nomination George Denison.

Thomas B. Rodgers, of the Eighteenth Ward, nominated James E. Withrow, and he was seconded in all quarters in a way that showed he was pretty sure of the nomination. The ballot, when announced, resulted as follows:

Withrow, 115.
Denison, 28.

Withrow was declared the nominee.

For Judge of the Court of Criminal Correction, Myer A. Rosenblatt nominated George Denison. Everybody in the convention seemed to be for Denison for this place, and he was nominated unanimously.

For Clerk of the Criminal Court, Mr. Stirling, of the Fifteenth Ward, placed in nomination A. B. Paschell, Mr. Amelung, of the Fifth Ward, seconding the nomination.

Mr. Peter P. Dailey, of the Twentieth Ward, placed in nomination Mr. Archie Carr, whose nomination was seconded by Mr. Ziegenhein, of the Eleventh Ward.

The ballot was announced as follows:

Carr, 122.
Paschell, 21.

Carr's nomination was made unanimous on motion of Mr. Paschell.

FOR CLERK OF THE COURT OF CRIMINAL CORRECTION,

Mr. Archie Carr, of the Eighth Ward, moved the nomination of A. B. Paschell, and asked the convention to give him a unanimous nomination, as it would greatly strengthen the ticket. The nomination was seconded by Mr. Amelung, of the Fifth Ward. No other nomination was made, and Mr. Paschell received the unanimous vote of the convention.

FOR PROSECUTING ATTORNEY OF THE COURT OF CRIMINAL CORRECTION

Peter Dailey nominated William Kreiter.

Mr. Rosenblatt named for the place Irenæus D. Foulon, saying that he accepted a nomination before when he was sure he would not be elected.

Mr. Filley said: "Excuse me, Mr. Rosenblatt. We are nominating to-day men who will be elected. And we are nominating men who want their names used by this convention;" and he emphasized this statement with a tremendous rap on the table.

Mr. Rosenblatt said those were his sentiments and he was sure Foulon would be elected.

Peter Berger claimed that Foulon should go on the ticket as a representative of the French citizens.

The ballot was as follows: Foulon, 79; Kreiter, 64.

Foulon was declared the nominee.

FOR ASSISTANT PROSECUTING ATTORNEY OF THE COURT OF CRIMINAL CORRECTION

the Rev. A. J. Warner, a colored delegate of the Eightdenth Ward, placed in nomination Mr. John H. Johnson, a colored lawyer.

Mr. Ferriss, a colored delegate of the Tenth Ward, placed in nomination Mr. Albert Burgess, another colored lawyer.

The vote resulted as follows:

Johnson, 128.
Burgess, 15.

Johnson was declared the nominee.

For Coroner, Mr. John A. Amelung placed in nomination Dr. John N. Frank.

Mr. Chapin, of the Twenty-fourth Ward, placed in nomination Dr. L. S. Reber.

The vote resulted as follows: Frank, 122; Reber, 21; Frank was declared the nominee.

Mr. Rosenblatt moved that the City Committee have the power to appoint nominees to fill possible vacancies.

The chair stated that there was no necessity for such a motion, as all the parties nominated had sought the positions; at least it had been ascertained that they would accept the nomination. The motion was carried.

This closed the regular work of the convention. The next business was the breaking up of the convention into Senatorial and Representative districts to nominate three State Senators and fourteen members of the Legislature. The delegates were not all ready, so Mr. Pohlman moved that the convention adjourn until next Thursday morning at the same place at 10 a. m., then to make these nominations. After a good deal of dispute the motion was carried.

Mr. John H. Johnson was called upon and made a few remarks, and the convention adjourned until next Thursday.

The Ticket.

All the nominees of the convention are well known. Messrs. Rombauer and Clover are ex-Circuit Judges, and stand well at the bar. Mr. Frank is the law partner of Wm. Patrick and an excellent lawyer.

Messrs. Mason and Vogel are the present incumbents of the offices to which they were nominated.

Fred. Gerber is now a deputy in Hudson's office.

James E. Withrow is a lawyer, and was chairman of the City Central Committee in 1877.

George Denison is the Judge of the Second District Police Court.

Louis Gottschalk, a well-known German lawyer, ex-Circuit Judge, and was recently an anti-Filley man and a delegate to the Jefferson City Convention.

Archie Carr is a Deputy Sheriff.

A. B. Paschell is a deputy in the office of Nick Berg, City Register.

I. D. Foulon is a well-known young lawyer of French family.

Dr. Frank is the present Coroner.

John H. Johnson is a very pale mulatto, and is at present employed in the Custom-house.

Convention Chatter.

J. Milton Turner sat down on the stairway, but would not enter the camp of the enemy.

Pete Dailey seems to know every negro in town, and is left to manage this section of the vote exclusively.

Commodore Decatur, the old colored preacher and stand-by of the party, looms up in his place as a delegate.

Geo. M. Jackson, the Greenbacker and Geo. D. Reynolds, tea-party man, are among the lookers-on in the gallery.

The Fourteenth Ward, banner Republican, had its flag floating high in air in the northeastern corner of the hall.

Moses Fraley spent most of the recess in a close conversation with M. A. Rosenblatt, who is a delegate from the Eighteenth Ward.

Mr. Mason does not seem at home on the floor of the convention, and he evidently made up his mind to come after much fear and trembling.

The audience was not as large a one as had been looked for, but,at the moments of enthusiasm it added very appreciably to the volume of noisy approbation.

Dick Johnson looked quietly after his own interests as a candidate for Barney Dierkes' place, and promised to beat his opponent out of sight if he secured the nomination.

Some disappointment was expressed over Filley's opening speech, as it was expected that the "old man" would take the opportunity to get even with a number of his enemies.

Mr. Joseph G. Lodge came on the floor during recess and said in conversation that he would not take the nomination for Criminal Judge. He says that the convention can nominate him if it chooses.

The Filleyites are often met with the remark that a house divided against itself cannot stand alone, and they reply that they think they have secured the inside of the house in the division, and given Library Hall the outside.

Among the most prominent Democrats in the lobby is to be seen "Buck" Murphy who will be remembered as the former candidate for the School Board in the Fourth Ward, whose chances were annihilated because the police ran him in on general principles the night before the election.

Little Wm. Wilson, the "colored editor," came around to make a "kick" for his colored brother, Alfred Burgess, as against John H. Johnson, another negro, who is the most prominent candidate for Assistant Prosecuting Attorney of the Court of Criminal Correction. Dailey talked rather fiercely to little William, and soon had him to leave.

WE need no "Queen" of any kind in our Republic, especially none that pretends to be "natural" while it is rendered effervescing by the same process as Enno Sander manufactures his delightful, pure, sparkling waters.

Larceny.

Oliver P. Reed was arrested and lodged in the Chestnut Street Station this afternoon on a charge of larceny preferred by Charles Hull and John Hill. Reed was lodging at McAndrews', 205 South Fifth street, and while the other lodgers slept, at 5 a. m., Reed appropriated the contents of their pockets to his own use. Hull awoke while Reed was searching his pockets and related the circumstances to the police. Hull is minus $3 and Hill $2 50, which leaves them unable to return to their country home.

Counterfeit Notes.

With the many strangers who have swarmed into our city, some bad as well as the good have come. Unwelcome visitors in the shape of "pushers of the queer," are in our midst and plying their vocation vigorously. It may be well to note and remember that the following counterfeit notes are likely to be presented: Farmers' and Manufacturers' Bank, $10; City National Bank, $10; both of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., of series A.

POLITICAL.

The Tariff Commission.

NEW YORK, October 5.—Peter Cooper addressed the Tariff Commission to-day saying the country wanted a permanent tariff, one that would not be broken up every ten years. A lengthy paper prepared by Mr. Cooper was read, containing a review of the question under investigation, also treating generally of the causes of the last panic and present prosperity of the country. The pamphlet also advocated protection for labor, and this could only be done by the amount of duties that shall equal the difference between the cost of a day's labor in our country as compared with the cost of a similar day's labor in other countries. The difference when carefully examined will be found to be on an average in this country from 50 to 150 per cent more than is now being paid for similar labor in other countries.

A POINT FOR THE POLICE.

Brace Faro is Dealt in this City Unknown to the Police.

James Alcorn is the name of a rustic gentleman of an advanced type who came down from Buchanan county to see the Fair and the Veiled Prophets. In his previous visits to the Future Great, Jim was in the habit of bucking faro at one of the square bunkos which were then in operation. He was somewhat delighted when, on Tuesday evening last, he met a young man, who was also a devotee of the shining little box and who knew where a game was in progress. This was what Mr. Alcorn was looking for, and they at once repaired to a den. The rustic gentleman was not over familiar with the game and only kept tracks of his bets with considerable trouble. After a deal or two it dawned on him that he would not win at that game and withdrew. Since then Alcorn has learned that he was "steered" against a "brace game" at some place near Sixth and Pine. Of this much he is certain, and to-day he is looking anxiously for the young gentleman and the place where he dropped his monoy.

A Midnight Disturbance.

Shortly after midnight last night quite a disturbance occurred at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and Pine streets. A servant girl but recently employed, sixteen years of age, occupying a third floor room, raised an outcry and charged one of the boarders with attempting a criminal assault. The police say that the house and its inmates do not bear a very enviable reputation, and think that the assault was very probably arranged. The sidewalk was quickly covered with excited people clamoring for the shooting or hanging of the man, but the police soon quelled the excitement, and the crowd dispersed without any further demonstration.

TERRIFIC EXPLOSION.

Two Houses on Franklin Avenue Blown Up.

Four Men and Two Women Seriously Injured.

A Mysterious Occurrence, Supposed to be Caused by Gasoline.

Full Details of the Accident--Remarkable Escape of Many Persons.

People residing in the vicinity of Sixteenth and Franklin avenue were disturbed this morning by a wonderful explosion. The report, which is said to have been as loud as a cannon, was followed by the shrieks of a dozen women and the clanging of the fire-bells. When order was partially restored it was discovered that the noise all came from a double three-story brick tenement, Nos. 1606 and 1608. The latter structure presented a most remarkable sight. The walls were still standing, but all the windows, partitions, walls and floors of the first story were torn to atoms and scattered in confusion about the back yard and the sidewalk in front. The firemen found it necessary to extricate two women from the wreck, who were pointed out by a party of half a dozea excited inhabitants gathered in the back yard. Various statements were made as to the cause of the strange phenomenon. It appeared that a man named Henry Heinman, a butcher and sausage-maker, living on the second floor of 1608, had had occasion to go into the cellar at 6 o'clock to get some kindling to make a fire. The cellar, being without windows, was quite dark at that hour, so that he found its necessary to light a match. He lit it on his pants, and the next thing that he was quite sure of was that he was moving rapidly towards the other side of the cellar, where he stopped with a jolt and a most intense pain in the back. When he opened his eyes the cellar seemed and his hands and face were almost blistering with heat, his hair and beard being burned to a crisp. He heard a deafening roar and felt the ground shake underneath him. As soon as he could gather strength he ran towards the stairway leading into the back yard, and when he reached the open air his strength failed and he lay helpless on the ground until taken care of by somebody in the crowd. It was rumored that Heinman was blown through an aperture in the floor and that he afterwards fell back into the cellar, but the man who is credited with heaving witnessed the spectacle could not be found. After telling the story about being blown from one side of the cellar to the other he declared himself that he could not tell what had happened to him. At the time of the explosion all the occupants of the house, with one or two exceptions, were in bed, and six of them, including Heinman, were badly injured. The cause of the explosion could not be satisfactorily accounted for. By some it was declared that one of the sufferers, a man named Frank Kronthaler, a chemical dyer and cleaner, kept a barrel of gasoline in his cellar and that it had created the gas for the explosion. This statement, however, was denied by Kronthaler, who was disposed to charge the catastrophe to an irregularity of gas-pipes that furnished the light. Kronthaler occupied the first floor of No. 1608, directly over the place where the match was lighted. When the scene was visited by a POST-DISPATCH reporter this portion of it presented the most exaggerated picture of confusion, a splendid relic of the horrible scene that occurred a few hours before. The entire floor had changed its position, and there was an aperture six feet wide in the middle running the entire length of the room. The ceiling was pierced with two holes, one close to the pavement and one in the rear, such as would be made by a cannon ball.

FILLED WITH A BLAZE,

THE HOLE

nearest the back yard is the largest. This was supposed to have been directly above the place where the butcher shot into the air. It was not suspected that the hole was made by his head, but by the gust of air, and that he was borne upward by the force of the blast. The furniture could scarcely be distinguished from the remnants of the broken partition walls which had fallen in a heap in the midst of the floor, where the pieces of a bedstead, a stove, a table and a wash-stand lay piled up as high as a man's waist. Between this and No. 1606 there was a common passage way, such as is used in all tenements of this character, both walls of which were only of plaster and lathes. The west wall of the passage was almost all on a level with the floor, being careened toward the east. The other wall, which beat the same way, gave further evidence that the force of the explosion came from the basement of 1608. The cellar and second story of this latter number were also badly torn up. The reporter, who followed the policeman into the cellar, witnessed a strange sight. To start with there were five or six dead rats lying about the ground in various directions, in attitudes indicating that their morning's frolic had been suddenly ended by the flames which had caused their death. The fact that the force of the explosion was terrific was shown by the dislodgment of over half of the stone foundation-wall dividing the cellars of the structures. Not only this, but every single joist was broken short off at the ends where it was imbedded in the brick-work, so that the floor was entirely loose and free to be thrown upward. A man named Hough, who lived on the second floor, was thrown out of bed by the force of the explosion, and his wardrobe was upset, but none of his family was hurt. A man named Helsner, who lived on the third floor, claims to have been thrown out of bed also. He says that when he was awakened he lay upon the floor, and the whole house was shaking as violently as if an earthquake were in progress.

THE FIRST FLOOR AND CELLAR,

No. 1606, had suffered severely, and presented to the eye of the visitor a scene fully as wretched and appalling as that already described. The bed in the back room, on which Mr. and Mrs. Anton Frank slept, had been lifted up and turned over. The stove, in which a fire was being kindled, was upturned and buried in a mass of plaster which had fallen from the walls and ceiling. There was also a large hole in the floor of this apartment and the cellar door. Pieces of chairs and the glass windows lay piled up in the yard. The occupants of No. 1606 were Mr. and Mrs. Frank and Anton Seidel, a shoemaker employed by them.

THE INJURED WERE

Anton Frank,
Mrs. Ottilia Frank,
Mrs. Birdie Kronthaler,
Frank Kronthaler,
Lawrence Seidel,
Adolph Heinman.

Adolph Heinman, who had lighted the match, was the most severely injured, perhaps, having swallowed the flames, besides being severely bruised on the outside. He was also badly bruised in being jostled around. He could scarcely talk. His ideas seemed to be incoherent, and it is feared that he will not recover.

Anton Frank, the shoemaker who owned the shop at 1606 was burned about the face and had received some bruises. He was in bed at the time.

Ottilia Frank, wife of the latter, who was also in bed, was held down by the debris, the bed having fallen on top of her. The bedclothing took fire from the stove, and before she could be found and removed her feet and legs had been severely burned and blistered as high as the knees. She also suffered from bruises and from fright.

Anton Kronthaler was severely burned about the face and hands and other parts of the body which were exposed. He also received a great many bruises all over the body, having been jostled about the room in an exceedingly lively manner. The effect of the hot air upon his lungs also gave him trouble.

Mrs. Birdie Kronthaler suffered from burns and bruises. Lawrence Seidel, the shoemaker's employe, who was making a fire, was covered with burns. He had nothing on his body but a thin undershirt, so that the burns cover breast, shoulders and back.

AT 10 O'CLOCK THIS MORNING

the police were in charge of the premises, and the people were removing their goods, such as were of any use. The whole damage done by the disaster will not fall far short of $5,000. The main walls of the building are perfectly solid, but the floors and partitions are considered dangerous. The damage was all due to the force of the explosion, as there was but one fire burning when the engines arrived and very little water was thrown. Slight damage was done the store of Nichols & Co., No. 1604 same street, a bay window being blown out of shape by a blast of air that forced itself through the crevices of the cellar walls. The latter firm deals in gasoline and other oils, but are unable to account in any way for the explosion. They say they have not sold any explosives to anybody in that neighborhood, and that all their oils are in the same condition they were left the night before. The several police officers on duty there are under the impression that there is a barrel contained in the debris which held gasoline. They cling to this theory because there appears to be nothing wrong with the gas-fixtures, no bad smell being anywhere observed.

by the kindness os Dr. Dean, the resident physician at the City Hospital, a POST-DISPATCH reporter obtained the statements of the injured persons at their bedsides.

ADOLPH HEINMAN,

who caused the explosion, was injured more seriously than any of the others. He was found stretched on the bed in one of the wards. His face was swelled and spotted with blisters. He was unable to open his eyes, which were burned by the explosion, and related his story without seeing his auditor. "I went down stairs to get some kindling out of a barrel. Now that I think of it I believe that I did smell gas in the cellar but I did not pay any attention to it. I had a cold and could not smell very well. I took a match from my pocket, and, as I was always accustomed to do, I struck a light on my pants. I was in a hurry to go to my booth at the Fair Grounds. I remember seeing the blue flame of the match as it burned in my hand, but that is all. While I was looking at it I was suddenly wrapt in flames and knocked over to one side against the wall, a distance of about six feet. As soon as I was able to see what had happened, I escaped through the door. I don't know how the gas escaped."

ANTON FRANK AND OTTILIA,

his wife, were asleep when the explosion occurred. Mrs. Frank said she was awakened by a loud report and some of the furniture falling on the bed.

FRED. KRONTHALER

and his wife, Birdie, lived at 1608. He had left the room a few minutes before six, and put his foot on the threshold just as the explosion occurred. Kronthaler is a tailor, and to-day said:

"I was just coming in when the explosion occurred. I thought somebody shot at me only a few inches from my face. My hair was singed and my face burned. I had myself painted with white-lead and I am going out with my wife, who is not hurt much."

LAWENCE SEIDEL,

a shoemaker, was at work on his bench in No. 1606 and was injured more seriously than those in 1608 except Heinman himself. "I was at work when the explosion happened. The tools fell off of the bench just as if a strong wind swept through the room. Then the flames followed and set fire to my shirt sleeve and some paper that was on the bench near me. My arms smart painfully. I did not know or had no idea what had happened."

DR. DEAN,

who made an examination of the patients, said: "The burns are all surface and with some care we will have them all right again. If the patients are brought here before any curatives are applied, we usually treat them successfully."

AMATEUR ART.

Its Latest Application for the Embellishment of Goods.

A Modern Mania Which is Infecting Lovers of Light Literature.

The inborn love of pictures is the origin of the curious and expensive mania which has prevailed for many years in Europe, for a shorter time among the wealthy bibliophiles of New York and Boston, and has just broken out in St. Louis. This mania has for its gratification the private illustration of books. A first condition is that the person affected must be possessed of very ample means and of the best taste in the selection of his materials. The result is extremely interesting, and even valuable—that is when taste, judgment and experience are brought to the task. But even under rude conditions a very favorable and profitable result may be secured, for the principle underlying and directing the mania is really good and genuine. The first step will be to secure, say a large edition of some standard work like Bancroft's History, for instance, which will be put into the hands of a professional person to inlay—that is to insert each leaf in a large margin; a very nice and delicate process, done in a hot-press, the edges being first given a "feather edge"—that is fined down to about half their thickness, so that the joinings shall offer no "ridge." This converts the book into large handsome volumes, so that prints of great size can be used. Next begins the hunt for prints, and not only for prints, but for advertisements, old newspapers, autograph letters, water-color drawings and so on, and as each print is dated, the whole arrangement has a sort of historical merit, and the comparison and progress becomes highly interesting to the curious. When all is tolerably complete, the book, now swollen to five or six times its original bulk, must be divided into portions, each portion becoming a volume. Next title pages are specially printed, with VOL. I., VOL. II., etc., and the whole may be bound temporarily in boards, which will admit of further additions; but it is generally handed over to a binder and sumptuously and stoutly bound. The effect of turning over the pages is sometimes dazzling and no modern illustrated book can compete with it. All these little loose prints and scraps that have floated down to us on the surface of the waters, escaping destruction so wonderfully, belong to their age, and are significant but fixed in their place, and part of a collection, they become full of meaning. In the market such works, when directed by taste and labor, are worth great prices, and, indeed, there is a great and special value in them.

As has been stated the

has reached St. Louis. A well-known and wealthy bachelor lawyer of this city who has an extreme, though altogether theoretical passion for the sea, has for several years been engaged in illustrating Herman Melville's forgotten story, "Moby Dick." This novel is without any doubt the most reliable authority upon the whale fishery extant. It is full of much very curious information concerning not only the whale and the "multitudinous seas" in which the leviathan dwells, but its description of the town of Nantucket, Mass., is exceedingly interesting and valuable. The book bristles with facts. The illustrator has gone to his work with a genuine fondness for the author and a proper appreciation of the nature of his subject. "Moby Dick" and works of its class are not favorites with private illustrators, who usually prefer some historical or biographical work, as affording the best subject for the gratification of their habits, and the selection of Melville's novel for the purpose was, therefore, all the more happy. A POST-DISPATCH reporter recently had a peep into the book. The pictures, etc., with which it abounds are all of them very interesting, and taken in connection with the text are of great assistance in enabling the reader to get at the meaning of the author. The illustrations have been procured at great trouble and much expense from every corner of the world. Already more than $400 are invested in the collection and the work is far from complete. It is the intention of the collector to donate the book to the Public School Library. To show the thoroughness of his work it may be apropos to mention that a copy of the whole song from "Olivette," score, words and all, with the names and pictures of the actresses who have rendered it, where it was possible to obtain them, finds a place in the book. Nor is the dead whale which Fred. Englehardt tugged about the country and exhibited forgotten, for copies of the pictures and the showman's announcements is inscribed, among a mass of other pictures in the book. To the collection everything bearing on his subject is appropriate, and to be procured if possible.

In conversation with the reporter the collector said: "There is one extraordinary collection of books owned by a gentleman whose residence, near Brooklyn, N. Y., I visited last summer. He is a bachelor and his name is strange to the people of St. Louis. I will, therefore, withhold it. His library is a paradise of art in books and bronzes. In his small but ornate collection is a copy of Boccaccio's 'Decameroe,' two volumes octavo, extended to four by the insertion of 320 prints characteristic of the text, except that they are drawn with a freer and more ecstatic hand. Here also is the small quarto edition of R. Payne Knight's 'Essay,' extended by illustrations of the highest significance, to two volumes. It is a beautiful and worthy book. Also the 'Secret Cabinet of the Royal Museum at Naples,' illustrated with eighty drawings by Italian artists of the more recent discoveries at Herculaneum and Pompeii; also 'The Life of Nell Gwynne,' with extremely characteristic points illustrating some of the frailties of her eventful career; also Hollar's Celebrated Courtezans of the time of Charles II; also a large 12 mo. published in 1709, entitled 'The Secret Qualities of Both Sexes, or the New Atlantis,' by Miss De La Revere Manly. This book scandalized some persons of rank, for which the author was tried and found guilty. The book has been extended to three volumes by the insertion of 189 points. She was also the author of 'Royal Mischief,' the best named book I ever saw."

"To show that the private illustration of books is sometimes continued the reporter's informant, "I will state some of the prices obtained for books illustrated in this manner. A wealthy Bostonian not long ago paid $10,000 for a privately illustrated copy of Boswell's Life of Johnson; $50,000 have been offered for a complete edition of Hollar. Granger's Biographical History of England is worth any sum that the owner chooses to ask for it. Ireland's History of the Stage," illustrated by M. Augustine Daly, sold at auction for $1050. Mr. John H. V. Arnold, of New York city, is engaged in illustrating the same work, and has already expended over $9,000 in engravings for it. The privately illustrated books in the library of Mr. John A. Rice, of Chicago, are worth $46.000; $1.240 were paid for an illustrated "Knickerbocker History of New York." Six hundred dollars was cheerfully paid for a copy of Ike Walton's "Complete Angler," a favorite, with illustrations, by the way.

"Mr. Robert Hoe, Jr., of New York, has a large library of privately illustrated books, which have cost several thousands. He pursues a method of his own in private illustration, and not one of his choice editions, which are from foreign presses, has been deformed by the inlaying or building-up process. He prints nearly all his with as much nicety as though originally intended for his works, and only a few of them are inlaid. Mr. Hoe's 'Izaak Walton' has been extended from two volumes to ten by the insertion of 1,303 prints, artist proof in India paper, original drawings and water-colors. This is probably the finest book in existence. It is immaculate."

MURDERER ARRESTED.

An East St. Louisan Caught and Identified.

The arrest of Mike Grogan on suspicion turns out to be of much more importance than was at first supposed. Several parties in East St. Louis, among others his old landlady, have identified him beyond doubt as T. J. Scharum, an escaped murderer from that burg. About a year ago Scharum and his brother-in-law, James Coleman, quarreled over family affairs, Coleman accusing Scharum of criminal intimacy with the former's wife. The difficulty was apparently adjusted by some of the neighbors, and both men started through town, burying the old quarrel in intoxicating liquors. About 6 o'clock in the evening they returned to their home, opposite St. Patrick's Catholic Church, East St. Louis, and renewed the quarrel at the foot of the stairway. Scharum pulled a revolver and fired, the bullet entering Coleman's breast and causing death four days afterwards. Scharum walked to the river, took the ferry to St. Louis, and eluded the police till arrested here Tuesday night. The relatives of the dead man, being also relatives of the murderer, refused to furnish the police a description of the murderer, or any information which might lead to his arrest. When notified of his arrest in St. Louis they refused to identify the prisoner. Several other parties were acquainted with him, and readily accompanied the police and identified the prisoner as Scharum. Officer Stack, of East St. Louis, is in possession of the necessary papers and will take the prisoner to Belleville this afternoon to await his trial. The East St. Louis police had abandoned the case shortly after the murder was committed, and had no hopes of ever capturing the murderer.

Fatal Railroad Accident.

PITTSBURG, October 5.—This morning at an early hour, while the first section of a freight train was standing at Linden station, a few miles from this city on the B. & O. Railroad, it was run into by the second section of the same train, seriously injuring Conductor Ruffner and Brakeman Sanders, who were in the caboose of the first section, and slightly hurting Brakeman Cline of the second section. The caboose and two freight cars of the first section were badly broken, and the engine of the second section slightly damaged. The accident was caused by the failure of flagman Devine to go back the proper distance and on account of the dense fog. Sanders has since died, and Conductor Ruffener will lose a leg. Cline will recover.

Two Tons of Three-Cent Coins.

From the Philadelphia Record, Sept. 22.

The United States Mint in this city has just received over two tons of three-cent silver pieces which by act of Congress have been abolished from the national coinage. This is, however, only about one-fifth of the quantity of these small coins which are to be brought here from the various sub-Treasuries in the country, there having already been redeemed more than ten tons. These three-cent pieces now in the Mint would fill three large wagons. They are to be re-coined into ten-cent pieces, as the three-cent nickel pieces are to take the place of the old silver three-cent coins. The Treasury Department is redeeming the small coins as fast as possible, and in a few years they will entirely disappear, and only the nickels will be in circulation. The coins have lost a very considerable per cent. of their intrinsic value by usage, in some cases amounting to as much as 25 per cent. In fact, they are rapidly wearing out. This is one reason why they were abolished and the harder and more convenient nickel substituted.

A TOUGH TOWN.

How Certain Respectable People Enjoy Themselves.

Columbus (Ind.) Special to Cincinnati Commercial.

There is not a tougher city in the State of Indiana than Columbus. Its reputation for morality is away below par. It possesses as fine saloons and gambling-houses as any city in the State, has two Democratic daily newspapers, and, although heretofore called upon many times to furnish disgraceful proceedings for the newspapers, it comes to the front to-day with a proceeding that for novelty, as well as indecency and disgracefulness, "takes the bakery" undoubtedly. On Third street, north of the Court-house, is situated the notorious gambling-house Marble Hall. At precisely 12 o'clock to-day, a fine landau drove up to this house, and almost immediately there came out a man perfectly naked—strip, stark naked—and taking a seat in the rear of the vehicle, with the top thrown back, he was driven up Washington street, the main street of the city, to Eighth street and east on Eighth several squares, where he stopped, alighted from the carriage, entered a house, came out almost immediately and was driven back to Marble Hall in the same condition—perfetly nude, without even a hat or collar on. Washington street, as a matter of course, was thronged with pedestrians at this hour of the day, both male and female, going home to their dinners, and the sight of a naked man going up the middle of the street in a carriage is liable to cause a panic among the populace, especially among the female portion. Of course, this occurrence caused considerable excitement, and from one of the parties interested your correspondent learned the following facts:

It seems that among a party assembled up stairs at Marble Hall were Francis T. Crump, one of our most prominent and wealthiest citizens, and David Newsome, a Justice of the Peace, elected on the Democratic ticket. In some manner the conversation arose concerning a mortgage of $980 which Crump holds on Newsome's property, in which Newsome was negotiating for its release, which it seems was unavailing until Crump, either as a joke or otherwise, told Newsome that if he would go home naked he would release the mortgage. This was no sooner said than Newsome procured a lawyer, had the proposition drawn up in writing, duly signed, and at 12 o'clock ordered a carriage and was driven home as above. The matter has caused a great amount of indignation and shows a decided lack of manhood on the part of Newsome, and certainly a forfeiture of all claim to decency and respectability, who would make such a disgraceful exhibition out of himself for the purpose of having a mortgage released. It only shows a preference for money to decency. What adds more to the disgrace of it is, that Newsome is a peace officer, having been elected a Justice of the Peace last spring, and when the peace officers wilfully violate a law, both of morality and the laws of our Government, then it would seem that they might as well be dispensed with. He is a member of high standing of the Knights of Pythias and Masons; the more to be regretted. The matter will undoubtedly receive the attention of the grand jury.

Stage Struck Mrs. Dennison.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

Concerning Mrs. Neill Dennison's entrée into the theatrical profession, mention of which was made several days ago, a Columbus correspondent telegraphs under date of September 29, as follows:

"There was no financial necessity for her to earn her living. Rumor has had it for some time past that she was studying for the stage, but wherever such rumors were given credence it was inferred that she was to appear as a star in the profession. The rumor was not believed, because she inherited recently a handsome fortune from a relative, and her husband, who is practicing law in Colorado, will inherit more than $100,000 of his father's estate. Col. W. Neill Dennison has been absent from the city for a year or more, but it has not been supposed that he and his wife have parted. The World correspondent has learned that one evening about two weeks ago there arrived at Uhrig's Cave, in St. Louis, two ladies, one young, pretty and fresh-looking, the other somewhat older, but not unattractive, who immediately inquired for Mr. Charles E. Ford. They seemed to be tired, and had evidently been traveling. They found Mr. Ford. They had come from Columbus to join his opera company in answer to a telegram, and had never been on the stage. He knew nothing of their antecedents and engaged them as a purely business venture. They were sent to a boarding house, but had not been there longer than two days when the younger one was recognized by another boarder as the daughter-in-law of ex-Governor Dennison. Mrs. Dennison said she was the wife of Governor Dennison's son. She said she was about to join a comic opera company. She made her first appearance in 'The Merry War,' and was on the stage each evening during the remainder of the engagement. The lady who recognized her earnestly urged her to return home, but she declined to take the advice. Mrs. Dennison's excuse for this step is that she wants to earn an independent living and that she believes she has talents for the stage. Mrs. Dennison arrived in this city from St. Louis to-day. She is to decide to-morrow or Monday whether she will take the position of leading lady in the "Judge Masher Company," recently organized here and now playing in the country towns, or go to New York and take a place in opera there. The probability is that she will go to New York, where her extraordinary beauty and fine voice will attract more than ordinary attention.

STEAMSHIP GAMBLERS.

How Time is Killed in Crossing the Raging Ocean.

From the New York Times.

Petty gambling on shipboard has always been in vogue as a relief from the tedium and monotony suffered by passengers, and men who would as soon cut off their right hands as play cards for money on shore, on board ship would not hesitate to take a hand in the seductive game of poker or "vingt-un," while betting on the "run" of the ship has always been freely indulged in. All this was very harmless when one knew one's fellow-passengers and risked sums altogether insignificant, but now that a ship's passenger list often foots up a couple of hundred, not more than half a dozen of whom know anything of each other's antecedents, what was formerly an innocent pastime is fraught with danger. The smoking-room has now become a gambling-hell, and not in miniature either, with all the accessories of choicest wines and spirits, which flow like water, while from immediately after breakfast the very demon of play seems to take possession of its occupants. Pools, sometimes, to the number of four or five, are gotton up each morning, and an auctioneer obtained a ribaldry and blasphemy which would do justice to a Wall street den, and often aggregate twenty to thirty guineas each, and, of course, the winner would be looked upon as very "small" if he did not stand half a dozen of champagne; so that gambling and drunkenness go hand in hand. Into this atmosphere the young men who are sent abroad by commercial houses naturally gravitate, (in fact it is the only place of refuge in a storm), and very soon become initiated and active participants, and their employers would be astonished, not only at the value of the stake, but at their dexterity and familiarity with all gambling devices. In fact, a beardless youth informed the writer that he had realized enough to pay all his personal expenses for the four weeks during which he should be abroad. And a gentleman informed us that, having watched a young man whom he knew playing "poker" losing heavily, called him out, and, after remonstrating with him for his folly, threatened, unless he at once put a stop to it, that he would, immediately on his arrival, "cable" his employers, and subsequently had to lend him £100; but the worst feature of all is that the "card sharp," the professional gambler, "smelling gain from afar," now frequents the ocean steamer as he formerly did the Mississippi boat, and systematically plucks the unwary, and it is only within a few days that affiadavits have set forth that the fraternity, having been made aware that Mr. James Gordon Bennett was going over in a "White Star boat," thereupon took passage in her with the avowed purpose of despoiling him. We leave your readers to imagine, then, the moral atmosphere of a first-class ocean steamship in the height of the season after the passengers have recovered from sea-sickness, and the effect of it upon young men whose business requires them to make constant voyages. Naturally of buoyant spirits, attracted by the bonhommie which the roué and gambler so well affects, with plenty of money in his pocket and a generous letter of credit, is it any wonder that he falls a ready victim? The large sale of liquors is, of course, a great item in the economy of a steamer, and one almost shudders at the amount consumed, (the supply of brandy alone of the City of Rome gave out on her outward voyage), and the officers rather wink at the excesses—and we are told that the post of smoking-room steward is eagerly sought after and a premium paid therefor. On both the outward and homeward voyage the subscription alone, on board the vessel on which the writer was a passenger, to the smoking-room steward, exceeded $125, while his actual receipts were probably five times that amount, as successful gamblers are notoriously prodigal of their winnings.

A Female Smuggler.

New York Special to Chicago Tribune.

An expensive assortment of female raiment was seized from Miss McCready, of this city, who arrived from Liverpool yesterday in the steamship Erin. A seal muff, thirteen pairs of silk stockings, four embroidered nightgowns, several yards of embroidered velvet, linen handkerchiefs, embroidered skirts, embroidered corset-covers, silk fans, embroidered chemises, and other articles which she had not declared, and which it was suspected she wanted to smuggle, were found in her trunk. A $300 seal dolman, which she was wearing and a quantity of dress silk which she had concealed upon her person were also taken from the young lady.

All St. Louis has gone to the Fair to-day and the city wears a staid Sunday appearance.

The State election in Ohio will take place next Tuesday. Indications point to a Democratic victory.

There is no flattery so sincere as imitation, and Kansas City is now talking about a Veiled Prophet show in connection with its alleged Exposition.

Little Aleck Stephens was yesterday elected Governor of Georgia by a majority of something like 40,000. It is claimed that he gained flesh during the canvass. In this State politics are not so healthful.

A Paris dispatch announces the death of Madame Hermance Sandrin Mesguilon, the authoress. If the good lady had never written anything but her own name she would have attracted attention.

Maj. Edwards has launched his new paper, the Sedalia Dispatch, and has signalized the event by denouncing the "bolt" of his old comrade, Col. Crisp, in the Fifth District. Maj. Edwards is a disciplinarian. He believes in shooting deserters.

So far this week the weather has been all that could be desired and the attendance at the Fair has been magnificent. To-day, the great holiday for the city, the crowd will probably be the largest ever seen within the Fair Ground gates. Thanks to good crops and general prosperity.

Gov. Stanard's positive declination to be a candidate for Congress in the Ninth District is something of a disappointment, but there are other good men, no doubt, representing the commercial interests of the city, who will accept the Republican nomination and beat the Fee Fiend.

If Filley's convention nominates a first-class ticket to-day, the Republicans should support it. The suppression of bummerism in politics is a very desirable thing, but the personal spites of the Globe-Democrat should not be carried to the extent of turning the city over to the looting Mamelukes of the Democratic party in November.

The employes in the shops of the Missouri Pacific Railway were ordered out last Saturday to vote at the Democratic primaries for Broadhead against Glover, the man of their choice. The Missouri Pacific is controlled by Jay Gould. It is well known that Broadhead has acted here as Gould's attorney. The representatives of Gould in St. Louis well know the importance of having a man like Broadhead in Congress.

On the testimony of old Jim Legate, the St. Joseph Herald is charging that the Hon. James N. Burnes, Democratic candidate for Congress in the Fourth District, shot and killed a young man named Barber near Lawrence, Kansas, in the year 1855. It is claimed that from the blood of this young Free State martyr "sprung the great tree of liberty, under whose wide-spread branches four millions of slaves find freedom and citizenship." We were not aware until this that Col. Jeemes had done so much for his beloved country.

It is to be regretted that the Trades Assembly of the city has found a grievous fault with the best man on the Workingmen's Ticket—Col. Jay L. Torrey, one of the nominees for Circuit Judge. The Colonel is connected with the State militia, and the labor organizations are hostile to the militia. Col. Torrey began life in St Louis as a newspaper-carrier, and he is essentially a man of the people. Something should be done to reconcile the labor organizations with the men who have pledged themselves to bear arms to protect the State and uphold the laws.

Of course the story, started by the Paris Figaro, about the attempted assassination of Pope Leo, turns out to be without foundation. No piece of sensational news emanating from that journal has ever yet been verified. It is the Eli Perkins of journalism. During the late war in Egypt the Figaro published letters from the seat of war, claiming to have a representative at the headquarters of the English army. It had accounts of battles which never occurred. In the end it was proven that the paper had no correspondent whatever in Egypt, and that its "sensations" were evolved in the home office. Mr. Reinach was probably right when he declared in the Nineteenth Century that the Parisian press was "a press of appreciation rather than news."

David Newsom, a prominent citizen of Columbus, Ind., and a Justice of the Peace also, cleared his property of a thousand dollar mortgage the other day to please a facetious creditor, who offered to release the mortgage if Newsom would perform the Lady Godiva feat of going naked through the streets some eight or ten blocks, to his home, at high noon. Newsom stripped and was driven home and back in an open landau, hundreds of people witnessing the strange performance. He thereby demonstrated the fact that there is occasionally a prominent citizen and a magistrate who will both violate the law and outrage public decency for a bribe of $1,000. The merciful Lady Godiva rode au naturel through Coventry in order to relieve the people from grievous servitude imposed by her husband—a knavish representative of the Money Power—and her gracious errand protected her from the vulgar gaze as one "clothed on with chastity." The poet who celebrates Mr. Newsom's historical exploit should be assisted by the citizens of Columbus to write of him as one clothed on with tar and feathers when he next attempts to raise a mortgage by the ancient Coventry method.

A FLABBY DEFENSE.

We publish in another column the first and only defense of Col. James O. Broadhead's record that his friends have offered in explanation of the documents heretofore laid before the public by the Post-Dispatch. It is written by a gentleman who is an attorney-at-law, and the presumption is that he has been retained to present the legal view of the matter, and to make the best defense for his client that the case permits.

It will be observed that Mr. Robertson first meets the fact that Mr. Broadhead received fees from both sides in the celebrated Gas case, No. 16,419, by intimating that Col. Broadhead's partner, Sharp, may have been the wicked partner in this double fee matter, and that a tenderness for this dead partner's memory may be what is closing Col. Broadhead's lips on this disagreeable subject. (A case of Spenlow and Jorkins, perhaps.) A dead partner is a very convenient scapegoat, but Mr. Robertson sees that this will prove a poor reliance, and so he boldly takes the bull by the horns and assumes that the facts cannot be as the record shows they were, because on such a state of facts "Col. Broadhead would surely have been condemned by his professional brethren and could not have escaped proceedings for disbarment at the hands of our vigilant Bar Association."

A highly sufficient rejoinder to this assumption is the notorious fact that our "vigilant Bar Association" permits the bar to be infested by not less than twenty-five men who ought to be in the Penitentiary, and who could soon be put there if the bar were as sensitive to the honor of the profession as it should be. If disreputable shysters of comparatively little influence can continually flaunt the most dishonorable practices in the face of the community without having to confront any proceedings for their disbarment, it is nonsense to talk about disbarring a rich and leading member like James O. Broadhead for merely flopping over to the Gas Light Company's side of a case after he had pocketed $7,428 for prosecuting that same case in behalf of the city. No attempt has been made to disbar the Hon. A. Alpeora Bradley, whose utter disqualification for membership has been recognized by the highest court as sufficient ground for granting a convicted murderer a new trial, the court holding that, with Bradley as his lawyer, the prisoner had not enjoyed the assistance of competent legal counsel such as the law allowed him. Moreover, Mr. Frank J. Bowman, after having been disbarred, was reinstated, and as Col. James O. Broadhead's bar influence performed that feat, there will be no set of lawyers with nerve enough to attempt the disbarment of Col. James O. Broadhead.

HISTORY REPEATING ITSELF.

The Democratic party twenty-two years ago went out of power by its own folly. That folly took the shape of internal division. That folly alone preserved and continued Republican supremacy for many years. But folly, like fashion, changes. The Republicans have at last come to the very pass of criminal blundering and quarreling by which Democratic power was lost in 1860.

In New York, the first State of the Union, we see an open rebellion of a powerful wing of the party against its own ticket. Nearly every Republican organ refuses to support Folger. Thousands of Garfield or Half-breed Republicans avow their intention to defeat him. Tens of thousands more are so disgusted that they will not go to the polls on election day. The defeat of the Republican ticket is a foregone conclusion. The most remarkable feature of this conclusion is that the overwhelming triumph of Democracy is cordially desired, and will be brought about by divided and disgusted Republicans.

In Pennsylvania we see a spectacle equally striking. Two Republican tickets are in the field. The battle is waged not so much between Democracy and Republicanism as between two different, distinct and intensely hostile Republican factions. Each of these Republican factions would infinitely prefer the triumph of the Democratic ticket to the election of the rival Republican candidates. Here, too, Democratic victory is almost assured by Republican folly and dissension.

In Ohio we see Republican legislation and agitation which will drive, or has already actually driven, a conspicuous and faithful faction of the party into the ranks of Democracy. In Ohio the Temperance agitation, and consequent loss of the German vote, will probably accomplish the same result that opposition to Cameronism will accomplish in Pennsylvania and antagonism to Arthur and the Federal Administration will bring about in New York. In Ohio, too, Democratic victory will be due to Republican stupidity and disaffection.

In Washington we see such stupendous political blunders, nay, crimes, as the extravagance of a Republican Congress under the leadership of corruptionists like Robeson and Bill Chandler; the robbery of the public treasury under the guise of Navy and River and Harbor bills; the shameless blackmailing of all public officials, regardless of sex, age, color or condition, for an enormous corruption fund to buy elections; the wholesale plundering of the Post-office Department, as shown by the theft of millions of dollars through the Star Route Ring; the disgraceful failure of justice in the futile effort to bring the big thieves to punishment; the retention of the head and front of this ring as Secretary of the Republican National Committee; the alliance of the National Administration with the Repudiationists in Virginia; the open sympathy of the party in power with monopolies, corporations, and organized privileges; the elevation of venal mediocrities, like Keifer and Miller, into high places once held by Blaine and Conkling; the retirement of the ablest leaders, like Grant, Blaine and Conkling, to private life; the prostitution of the Supreme Bench by men like Wood, Bradley and Stanley Matthews, the tool of Jay Gould. Last but not least we see the end of a Republican quarrel in the "removal" of one President and the making of another by Republican assassination.

In our own State, we see the Republican party, already in a hopeless minority, frantically cutting itself into still smaller pieces, and surrendering, not only the State and Congressional districts, but even the important municipal offices in this city and many of the county governments, to the rampant bummers of the Bourbon Democracy.

Nothing but a miracle can prevent an overwhelming Republican defeat this year. But miracles do not happen in this country. A Democratic Governor in New York and Pennsylvania, a clean Democratic victory in Ohio, and the election of another Democratic House of Representatives, are therefore among the probabilities of this year.

We submit whether it is not time to change the fashion and speak about Republican stupidity. It would seem that in this year at least, the Republicans are singularly fortunate in producing the largest possible amount of imbecility with the least possible brains, all along the line, from New York to Missouri.

SHORT AND SWEET.

Some people just now do not understand the independent position of the Post-Dispatch. Republicans still think we are Democratic; Democrats say we are Republican; Independents think we are sometimes a little of each, yet not much of either.

Our Platform can be summed up very briefly:

In local politics the Post-Dispatch will never ask what candidate will be best for the Democratic or the Republican party. Our platform is, What candidate will be best for the city?

In State politics the Post-Dispatch will not ask what is best for the Democrats, or what is best for the Republicans. Our platform will be, What is best for Missouri?

In National politics we will not ask what is best for the Democracy, or what is best for the Republicans, but we will ask, What is best for the Country?

This is true Independence. This is the platform of the Post-Dispatch. This means good rather than partisan government. It means less waste and better streets and fewer crimes in St. Louis. It means a million of immigrants and millions of new capital for Missouri. It means reform at Washington.

We are in favor of any change or any party that will give the people progress and prosperity. But above all, we want a million of new people to come to Missouri.

The talented Ford Boys, who are exhibiting themselves in a cheap museum in New York City, are the recipients of many queer letters—most of them of a deprecatory and threatening character. The New York Star prints as a specimen the following from a noble-hearted gentleman residing at Newark, New Jersey.

To Messrs. Robert and Chas. Ford:

I have never yet met you nor do I care to, for, in my estimation, the deed which you committed in the murder of Jesse James is sufficient to banish you from the sight of man. What do you expect your future to be? Do you believe that honest men can ever entertain feelings of respect for such as you? It is said that you are of passing intelligence. If so, I wonder that the spirit of Jesse James does not haunt you. I am no prophet, but mark my words, you will never thrive, because there is blood on your soul. Even should you be so lucky as to escape avenging bullets you can never get on in life. You will become wandering Ishmaels and almost pray for death. But there is one avenue of escape for you—one alone—and that is through seeking Christ. His suppliance before the Father can purge your souls. Jesus is merciful. Jesus is forgiving. For thirty pieces of silver Judas betrayed the Savior, and for $10,000 you played the same trick on James. Judas went out and hung himself, and now I advise you to repent lest you do the same. Take your blood-money and devote it to some Christian purpose, and not to the life of debauchery which you lead in Chicago. Newark is in need of a home for men and women who have sinned and are too poor to reform without assistance. Take what is left of your deadly sin and devote it to this purpose. I know of a piece of ground which might be used to build a small home upon. It can be purchased cheap. If these words of advice strike a responsive chord in your hearts, advise me by return mail and I will appoint a time and place of meeting. Yours in Christian fellowship,

H. R. L.
Box 3018, Newark, N J.

We would say to this benevolent gentleman that the name of the principal accomplice of the Ford boys is T. T. Crittenden, and his address is Jefferson City, Missouri. He is a Christian gentleman, and it is barely possible that his conscience has now reached a state of fermentation which will admit of his making a donation to some worthy institution by way of penance. If the Ford boys conclude to endow the Newark home for unfortunate women the Governor will doubtless join with them.

The Best in the Great West.

From the St. Joseph Every Monday.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch has donned a new dress. It is very neat and looks elegant. The Post is beyond question the best and most progressive afternoon paper in Missouri—yes, the best in the great West. We prize it greatly.

PERSONAL.

—It is said that Queen Victoria intends to spend a portion of the coming winter in the South of France.

—The trial of Arabi Pasha began at Alexandria yesterday. If Arabi secures an American lawyer Wolseley and the rest will be lucky to keep out of jail.

—Donn Piatt is living on his own castle in Ohio, and he may be seen every morning at 6 o'clock repairing the break where the cows got into his cabbage-patch.

—A girl who recently disappeared from Norwalk, Conn., was found in a neighboring town doing housework. How her mind became affected is not known.

—Miletich, former Chief of the Omladina, the dreaded secret Slavonic society of the South of Russia, has become insane, and is now shut up in a mad-house.

—The German Catholics of Milwaukee have resolved to boycott the public schools. As very few people in Milwaukee are on speaking terms with the English language, their hostility to public schools is not strange.

—J. W. Johnson, until recently editor of the Sheldon (Ill.) Gazette, has been placed in jail for passing $2,000 worth of forged paper. It is indeed difficult to fetter the surging brain of a trained journalist with the galling chains of large pumpkins and cordwood for subscriptions.

—"An old servant who has been in the family for years and is a sort of privileged character on account of his long and faithful service to dead and gone ancestors" is now a proper thing for a swell family to have, and those who don't possess such an article should at once hire one.—[Boston Post.

—The Rev. George B. Simons, pastor of the Baptist Church at Greenbush, N. Y., who was recently found guilty of writing love-letters to a young lady of his congregation, his wife being at the time in excellent health, has resigned, and a dispatch says that "during his farewell sermon many women in the congregation wept." It certainly is sad to have such a lovely liar leave town.

—M. Bartholdi's colossal statue of "Liberty" may go to Boston instead of to New York. The latter city virtually accepted the gift in 1876, but has not provided the pedestal, which would cost about $200,000. The lukewarm way in which the New York people have treated the French givers has led the French committee having the matter in hand to offer the statue to Boston. The statue is nearly completed and will arrive in America in 1883.

BROADHEAD'S RECORD.

The Best Defense That Can be Made for the Alleged Statesman.

St. Louis, October 4, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Availing myself of your offer of space to any one willing to apologize for, explain or defend the record of Col. Broadhead, I will proceed to view the matter from the standpoint of one who fought for his Democracy with intense enthusiasm through the late war for Southern independence. I have not the paper with me containing your charges, but having read the article with considerable interest, will endeavor to discuss them from memory. It may be just as well to begin by saying that I see nothing in these charges which necessarily requires either apology or defense. The only serious charge is the one that he accepted fees on both sides as attorney in the famous gas case, and in this an important witness and actor, Mr. Sharpe, is dead, and it is an honor to Col. Broadhead that he has not sought to bring into the controversy the name of one no longer able to speak for himself. Moreover, were the facts as you state them to be, Col. Broadhead would surely have been condemned by his professional brethren and could not have escaped proceedings for disbarment at the hands of our vigilant Bar Association. I know nothing of the facts, but do know that, aside from this, there is not the semblance of a stain upon his character, and in passing judgment upon him it is our duty to take into consideration his long-established reputation among his fellow-men for honesty, great ability and sound judgment, and then give him credit for having done nothing in this instance unworthy his honorable name.

You charge him with displaying too much zeal in the Union cause at the beginning of the war, when, to save his State from secession, he advocated the turning out of office of every official in the State and filling their places with men of known loyalty. You do not pretend that in this he was not actuated by motives of the sincerest patriotism; neither is it at all clear that had his motive carried it would not have saved Missouri from much of the horrors of war.

The writer was on the other side at that period, but he knows how it was with himself, for he then often wished the whole Yankee nation had a single neck and that he could just get one fair blow with his sabre at that neck. No, Mr. Editor, those were war times, and it is likely we all felt then too utterly intense for anything.

Subsequently you say he lost much of his Union zeal when he became Provost Marshal of St. Louis. Well, right there was where he showed himself a true Democrat, devoted to the Union, but free from Radical fanaticism. In a question of State policy, in order to save his State to the Union, he advocated such extreme measures as he thought necessary. His object secured, and himself placed in a quasi-judicial position, he used his powers so far as he could, consistently with duty, to shield his fellow citizens from unnecessary persecution. He knew the men he was dealing with and how far he could trust them, and it is not contended by you that he weakened or endangered the Union cause by his subsequent leniency. The fact is, he strengthened it.

As to his course towards returned Confederates at the end of the war in advocating their restoration to citizenship, it is sufficient answer to this to point to the company he was in in that measure, where he had for co-workers those tried and true Union patriots, Frank Blair, Samuel T. Glover, John S. Phelps and others less conspicuous.

We next come to the Scheme and Charter matter. Your charge is that after serving as member of the Board of Freeholders he committed the crime of receiving a large fee from the County Court to defend that court in its attempt to uphold the apparent result of the Scheme and Charter election. Colonel Broadhead's answer to this is that he did not contemplate, in serving the public gratuitously as member of the board, to debar himself from practicing his profession—but, let me ask in addition, what connection was there between the framing of the Scheme and Charter and the question whether that instrument had been legally adopted by the people? And as to the manner in which he secured payment of his $1,000 fee in advance, the clear right to do this followed from his clear right to take the case at all. It would have been an act of folly with him to wait until the payment could be enjoined, when he had a chance to make a large fee in a legitimate manner. Finding fault with him for this seems to me to be the purest sort of Phariseeism. As a matter of fact most well informed people believe to this day that the Scheme and Charter was fairly defeated at the polls, and surely Col. Broadhead was not in honor bound to maintain that the instrument had been legally ratified! The charge of inconsistency in supporting Gentry for Governor in 1874 is too trivial for discussion, and the same may be said of the charge that he acted cowardly in declining to address the Frank Blair Association. There was nothing in his conduct in either instance inconsistent with the purest patriotism and soundest judgment. So much for your charges.

A Denial From Father Betts.

St. Louis, October 4, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Since some one, who "does not desire to have his name mentioned," has attempted to make me responsible for the withdrawal of float No. 16 from the Veiled Prophets' procession, I beg to say that his statement to your reporter is utterly untrue in every particular.

Geo. C. Betts.

[Our informants in this matter were two ex-Presidents of the Merchants' Exchange. We had reason to believe that they knew what they were talking about.—Ed. P.-D.]

A Suggestion for the Future.

St. Louis, Mo., October 4, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

As suggestions are in order, how would it do for the city to grant the right to the Committee of Arrangements of the "Veiled Prophet" procession to erect platforms along the proposed route, for them to charge a nominal price for a seat, the reserve from same to assist defraying the enormous expenses that the "V. P.'s" now have to stand. If such a plan were carried out, we would have fewer accidents arising from the overcrowding of hastily constructed seats, as was seen last night. If you think this worthy of attention, please insert it in your valuable paper.

TRANSLATION.

Edwardsville, Ill., October 3, 1882.

Joseph Pulitzer, Esq., St. Louis, Mo.

Permit me, a stranger to you, to address you a few lines. Your war against the gambling-dens has secured you the best wishes of thousands, and your crusade against the pot-house nuisance will make ten and hundred thousands deeply thankful to you. Any one judging the German public by the contents of our German papers would be led to believe that the German idea of personal liberty consists in the right to keep open, day by day, innumerable tippling-dens. Is it not possible to start a German newspaper which would use the cudgel in such a fearless and logical manner as your Post-Dispatch does?

Respectfully,

B. E. Hoffmann.

St. Louis, October 4, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A gang of hoodlums infests the neighborhood of Park avenue and Carondelet avenue. They not only insult, but beat and rob unsuspecting pedestrians whose business requires them to be out late. Why don't the police stop it, and if they are unable to do so why are citizens not allowed to carry weapons to defend themselves?

MISSOURI POLITICS.

Mr. Washington Irving Wallace, the Republican nominee for Congress in the Eleventh District, gives notice that a statement in the Post-Dispatch as to his declining the nomination was an error. The Post-Dispatch was misled by one of the papers published in his own district. Mr. Wallace says he has accepted and will begin an active canvass on the 15th inst.

St. Joseph is in rebellion against Col. James N. Burnes' machine-control over the Circuit Court. Ex-Gov. Silas Woodson is an independent candidate for Judge, and the St. Joseph Herald says: The action of the Republican convention yesterday, in endorsing Judge Woodson for Circuit Judge, was a wise move. He has given good satisfaction on the bench and the respectable element will not hesitate in their choice between him and ex-Judge Grubb, who is the candidate of Col. Burnes.

The Kansas City Journal is rallying the Republicans to the support of Col. John T. Crisp. It says: "One has only to walk about among the people to ascertain that the masses are for Crisp as a choice between him and Graves. It looks now as if the vote for Graves in this city would be reckoned among the scattering."

Kansas City Star: In the Fifth District of Missouri the Republican machinists say it is not expedient to nominate a candidate for Congress. In the Eighth District it is considered expedient for the party to nominate two; the party of the St. Louis boss nominating one, and the party of the Kansas City boss nominating another. It looks as though the lot of the average Missouri Republican was not a happy one.

Kansas City Journal: Senator Cockrell was in the city yesterday. He has just completed the canvass of the Fourth Congressional District. He told a friend that he was astonished to find so little genuine enthusiasm for James N. Burnes, the Bourbon nominee for Congress. The people, he thinks, generally believe that Burnes bought his nomination, and on this account there is much indifference as to his success.

The Plattsburg Lever says the whisky Republicans and Democrats of Clinton are preparing to bring out candidates against the anti-license nominees of the Democratic party for County Judges. Of the latter the Lever says: "Two-thirds of the Republicans will vote for them and about the same number of Greenbackers will do likewise; then a large majority of the Democrats of the county will vote with them. Let the whisky forces do their best."

The "Corner" Rules Committee.

The committee appointed by President Slayback to prepare a rule to take the place of the present "corner" rule on grain, met yesterday afternoon, but, as E. O. Stanard, one of their members, was not present, they could not get down to business. In an informal discussion it was shown that the four members of the committee at the meeting were unanimously in favor of strictly following out the ideas set forth in the pledge upon which they were appointed, and which is, in substance, to do away with all "corner" rules and let option trading be transacted without any protection being thrown around either side to the trade. It is probable a full meeting of the committee will be held to-morrow and the whole matter submitted to a vote of the Exchange on the same date the registration rules come up, the 16th of October.

Late last night Mrs. Fred. Rudel, while waiting on Tayon avenue with her husband for the railroad crossing there to be cleared, sat down on a large plank to rest. A spike, with the pointed end up, entered one of her limbs about four inches, causing quite an injury. The lady was taken to her home, corner of Seventeenth street and Clark avenue, and a doctor called.

MIXED MARRIAGES.

The Catholic Doctrine on the Subject.

Rev. Father Phelan Writes Another Strong Philippic.

A Post-Dispatch reporter called this morning upon Bishop Ryan, at his residence on Olive street, and submitted, or, rather, tried to submit to him the editorial article from the last number of the Western Watchman, in which Father Phelan throws more light and heat upon the subject of mixed marriages, especially those in which the Catholic sacrament has been supplemented by a Protestant ceremony. The Bishop, however, when the article was handed to him with a request that he give an opinion upon the soundness of Father Phelan's doctrine, stated that he had not yet read the article, and that, as it seemed a lengthy writing and its subject was of great importance and could not be passed upon without careful attention, he would not be able to express an opinion. The reporter stated that the gist of the article, the portion of it certainly upon which the Episcopal opinion was sought, was contained in the following extract from it:

"What astonishes us beyond measure is the opinion that prevails in certain Catholic quarters that had we known of the previous marriage before the priest we would not have been so severe and would not have been justified in passing censure at all. Had we known of the previous marriage we would have administered just two additional lashes. The marriage before the priest was a deception, and, under the circumstances, should never have taken place. No priest in Christendom could marry a Catholic who proclaimed the intention of supplementing the Catholic service with a Protestant ceremony. A Catholic that takes part in any heretical rite is guilty of a mortal sin, and no sacrament of the living can be administered to a man in mortal sin. To receive the sacrament of mortal sin is a sacrilege, and no priest can consent to a sacrilege. As well give the Holy Eucharist to an avowed apostate."

The Bishop, however, quietly, but firmly, declined to express any opinion on the subject. "Neither the Archbishop nor myself," he explained, "is responsible for the opinions published by Father Phelan, whose paper is not the official organ of the diocese. For this reason I do not care to have anything to say on the subject."

FATHER BRADY,

of the Annunciation Parish, who performed the ceremony for Dr. Tesson, the army officer whose marriage occasioned this discussion in Catholic circles, said:

"Father Phelan is bold and aggressive. He has spoken very plainly in this matter and no exception can be taken to his utterances on doctrinal points. He correctly interprets the law of the church. He has simply misconceived some of the facts in this particular case. Dr. Tesson came to me saying that he desired to marry a Protestant lady. It was his duty as a Catholic to apply to the priest of his parish, asking him to procure a special dispensation. A letter was sent to the Bishop and the Vicar-General, in the usual course, issued the dispensation. So far everything was regular. Then I saw some statement in the newspapers to the effect that there would be a double ceremony; that the young people would be married by a Catholic priest in the morning, and in the evening by a Protestant minister. I told Dr. Tesson that with this preknowledge of a contemplated double ceremony I could not perform the Catholic ceremony. Dr. Tesson at once caused the matter to be re-arranged, and there was, in fact, only one marriage, the one at which I officiated. It is true that Dr. Niccolls was present at the reception in the evening, and in connection with the celebration, toasts, music and so forth, he made a few remarks which may be construed as his blessing of the ceremony. The dispensation was not obtained through fraud in this instance. The laws of the church can not prevent young people, Catholics and Protestants, falling in love with each other, and in such cases authority is provided for a dispensation. If I had been informed before the dispensation was applied for that a double ceremony was to take place, of course that preknowledge and the fact itself would have been a fatal objection. As there was no double ceremony, however, the marriage under the Catholic dispensation was strictly in accordance with the laws of the church provided in such cases. Father Phelan speaks of the lax system of dispensations. There have been instances here where the Catholic marriage in the morning under a dispensation has been supplemented by the ceremony of a Protestant minister in the evening. The Bishop condemned this openly. Dr. Tesson as an officer of the army is fully imbued with a due sense of obedience to laws and he fully understood the discipline of the church in this case. The Protestant ceremony did not take place. Father Phelan has not misconstrued the doctrine of the church, but he has been mistaken as to some of the facts in this instance."

FATHER TOBIN,

of the Cathedral parish, said: "My attention has been called to Father Phelan's editorial remarks in the Watchman. I have not perused his second article on the subject of mixed marriages. The Watchman is not the organ of the diocese. As to the expressions in that paper on questions of church doctrine I must refer you to the Bishop, He is the only person authorized to speak; the expressions of priests are simply opinions based on their own interpretations. There have been some errors in the discussion of the subject opened up by the Watchman. A marriage of a Catholic to a Protestant by a Justice of the Peace is recognized, although the Catholic has committed an infraction of the church's law thereby. The ceremony can not be performed again by a priest, however. The marriage of two Catholics by a Justice of the Peace is not valid and cannot be recognized by the church."

A GOOD SHOWING.

Crooks Scarce During the Week—The Arrests—Finds.

In the opinion of the Chief of Police and Chief of Detectives the absence of foreign crooks from the city during the present week is due in a measure to the manifesto issued on Monday in which was a warning, both to residents and visitors, to keep their valuables in safe places, and to the crooks that they keep away from the city. It was thought that a well organized gang of thieves from Topeka would be here to work the Fair and crowds at the hotels and elsewhere, but they have not shown up. The number actually caught at work on "grays" has been far less this year than at any preceding one, and there are now only six men in the holdover against whom cases for anything except vagrancy can be made. Two or three men were caught at the Union Depot last night just starting in on the pockets of the bystanders, but before they had got anything they were arrested by Sergt. Burke. Usually during Fair week the Chief's office is crowded from morning till night by persons who have either been robbed or have lost their property. During all the week not more than a dozen complaints have been made of property either lost or stolen. Two or three drunken men have been gone through, but it was their own fault. A few people have been to the Central Office to-day with the information that they had either lost or found some money, jewelry or articles of value. An officer yesterday found a gold-plated bracelet and a black valise at the Fair Grounds, probably dropped by the owner during a crush.

F. H. Mitchell, of No. 117 North Main street, reported that he lost his patent-leather pumps while on his way home from the Veiled Prophets' ball early Wednesday morning.

While Andrew Murphy, who lives on the Bellefontaine road, near the cemetery, was strolling around the streets yesterday he picked up a roll of bills amounting to $62, on Fourth street, near Washington avenue. He turned the money over to Sergeant Lang, of the Chestnut Street Station.

Altogether the visitors may rest assured that thieves have not been able to do them much financial harm, and that their visits have been alike enjoyable and free from any loss. So shy have the crooks been that the arrests made by the detective force of the city will not exceed twenty. Around Tony Faust's, corner of Fifth and Elm streets, a more strict surveillance has been exercised by the detectives than elsewhere and only four arrests have been made from that locality.

ON THE CURB.

Speculative Trading in Grain in a Bucket-Shop.

The Merchants' Exchange was closed to-day, but the speculators could not resist coming down to their old haunts and indulging in "curb" trading. The "curb" in this instance was Fred. Von Phul's bucket-shop, where the Chicago and other markets were received, and were naturally attractive to the speculative element. Quite a large crowd of bulls and bears assembled by 10 o'clock, and there were some few feeble attempts made at trading in options, but the majority of the operators were indifferent, and there was no unanimous desire shown to join in. The Chicago grain markets were up a fraction and New York and Baltimore were also higher, but the only effect of this was to impart a somewhat stronger feeling to wheat in the local crowd. Corn started in pretty stiff, but softened slightly in value, as there was more of a disposition shown to sell than to buy the cheaper-priced cereal. Advices from Chicago stated that Lester was buying corn, but it seemed to be the general idea that the "longs" in corn were trying to realize at the present prices and the general feeling here appeared to be to sell. It was noticeable that some of the houses here that are known to be "long" were selling, noticeable among whom were E. A. Kent & Co. More confidence is expressed in wheat than in corn, and the sentiment appears to be that expressed by an operator, "Leave corn alone and buy wheat." The operators soon get tired of dawdling around the bucket shop. A motion was finally made than Dan Bartlett, the ex-caller of the Exchange, go through the regular options for the benefit of the operators, after which they should disperse. Dan Bartlett mounted the platform and called wheat, corn and oats. During and after this impromptu call a little October wheat sold at 92⅞c to 93c and year wheat at 91⅝c, November corn at 56⅝@½c "on the split" to 56⅜c, year corn at 49¾@⅝c "on the split," and later the latter option had 49⅞c bid, and May at 49c to 49⅛c. On the call November wheat was offered at 94⅜@¾c, with 94¼@½c bid; December at 95½c, with 95¼c bid; while 96¼c was bid for January, and $1 00⅝ for May; October corn was offered at 64c, bid 63⅝c; January at 47¼c, bid 46½c; October oats at 32c, bid 31¾c; November was salable at 31⅜c; December at 30¼c, and year at 30¼c. After Dan got through calling the crowd hung around for a few moments, but finally melted away one by one, and by 11 o'clock none of them were present.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

The Catholic Knights of America held a meeting in St. Patrick's Hall last night but transacted no important business.

The Council have been attempting to meet every night for the last two weeks, but thus far a quorum have failed to attend.

A warrant charging Charles Wolking with assault with intent to do great bodily harm was sworn out by Thomas Murphy this morning. Wolking and Murphy quarreled in a saloon, which terminated in Wolking using a club effectively on Murphy's head. The case will be tried this afternoon.

A team of horses attached to a country wagon took fright on Dyke avenue this morning and ran away, colliding with a large stone and capsizing the wagon, spilling the four occupants along the street. The driver, John Hogan, fell against a rock and received an ugly cut over the right eye. The other occupants escaped without much injury. The horses were captured about two blocks from the wreck, after demolishing the wagon. The accident was caused by a switch engine scaring the horses.

A man whose name is supposed to be John O'Connell while walking along the railroad tracks near the depot last evening came in contact with a passing bridge engine. When the engine was stopped the man was found lying near the rails apparently dead. Dr. Jennings was called, and found that the injuries sustained were not necessarily fatal. The flesh along the right side, from the shoulder to the knee, was horribly lacerated, and two ugly gashes across the face, besides several less severe cuts and bruises were the extent of his injuries. The man was taken to the police station and has been in an unconscious condition since the accident. An effort will be made to have him conveyed to the Belleville Hospital this afternoon.

John Loukas arrived in East St. Louis on the incoming Wabash train last night, and being of an economizing disposition undertook to walk across the bridge instead of riding over in the train. Mr. Loukas, being a stranger, mistook the Indianapolis and St. Louis trussel works for the bridge, and had proceeded only a short distance over the trussel when he made a misstep and fell to Cahokia Creek, a distance of about twenty feet. When fished from the water Loukas was in an unconscious condition. Dr. Jennings was summoned and found him suffering from severe bruises and internal injuries. Loukas was carried to the police station and will be sent to the Belleville hospital this afternoon. When starting over the trestle the man carried a satchel containing his clothing and $30, which the police could not find, and suspect was stolen by some of the parties surrounding the old man after his rescue from the creek.

The Death Roll.

Burial permits for the following named persons were issued to-day: Catharine G. Higgins, 8 months; Eleonora D. Hansly, 2 months; Genevieve Rozier, 3 years; William Klein, 1 year; daughter of Carl Brede; Robert C. James, 2 years; George Hunmers, 1 month; infant of Mollie Rogers; Webb Wheeler, 30 years; William Barrett, 60 years; Mary Donovan, 42 years, and Celina Ward, 2 days.

THE COMET.

It has Broken Into Three Unequaled Fragments.

Nashaille, Tenn,, October 5.—This morning at 4:30 o'clock Mr. E. E. Barnard of this city discovered that the nucleus in Cruil's comet had separated into three unequal fragments. The largest is estimated at 15,000 miles in length. The space between the fragment of the nucleus is estimated at not less than 2,000 miles. Yesterday morning Mr. Barnard observed that the nucleus had assumed the form of a long strip not less than 24,500 miles in length and 3,000 in breadth

CORROBORATED.

Cincinnati, October 5.—Prof. Wilson, of the Cincinnati Observatory, corroborates the statement coming from Nashville of the separation of the nucleus of the comet this morning into three unequal fragments. His estimate of their size and distance apart agrees with that made at Nashville. The disturbance makes no difference in the appearance of the comet to the naked eye.

"A LADIES' MAN."

The Champion Bigamist Deserts his Last Wife After Three Days.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

Chicago, Ill., October 5.—Detective Amberg, of Utica, New York, is here with James Carter, the trusted employé of a wholesale crockery house, wanted for bigamy. He married Mary Carew two weeks ago, and the third night after disappeared with a hundred and fifty dollars of her money. She made inquiries and discovered he had one wife in Missouri, one in Pennsylvania another in New York and another in Graceland Cemetery. Carter denies it and says he has been married twice, but the first wife died. He lived with Mrs. Davison, his alleged Missouri wife, but was never married. He is a fine looking Englishman, age forty and has the reputation of a ladies' man.

THE POISONED BOUQUET.

Mrs. Scoville Denies That It Was Poisoned at All.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

Chicago, October 5.—Mrs. Scoville, the sister of Guiteau, interviewed as to the poisoned bouquet, says the statement of Chemist Tilden surprises her. The bouquet was bought at her request by John Guiteau and was not in her hands, being carried by Miss Chevalier, secretary of the Society for the Protection of the Insane, who handed it to the son of Warden Crocker. Lawyer Reed was in the cell at the time and took the bouquet. She is sure there could be no poison in it when given to him. If at all she says it was done by some crank of the Mason kind.

A BAND OF INCENDIARIES.

It Is Composed of Members of a Disbanded Fire Company.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

Youngstown, O., October 5.—Twenty buildings have been fired by incendiaries within six months. Detectives to-day finally arrested David Baker, D. H. Evans, Benj. Gravil and Wm. Brannon, members of the disbanded fire department, suspicioned for some time. Finally Baker and his wife quarreled and the latter divulged. Evans and Brannon are out on $1,000 bail; the others are in jail.

Indications.

Washington, D. C., October 5.—Tennessee and Ohio Valley, fair weather, followed by local rains, easterly to southerly winds, slight change in temperature, stationary or lower barometer. Lake Region, partly cloudy weather and light local rains, winds mostly from east to south, stationary or lower barometer, slight changes in temperature. Upper Mississippi and Missouri Valleys, partly cloudy weather and local rains, winds from southeast to southwest, lower barometer, slight changes in temperature.

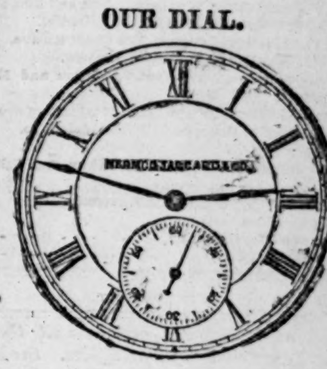
OUR DIAL.



MERMOD, JACCARD & CO.

Our grades of WATCHES, NAMED the STANDARD, KING, RAILROAD, MATHEY, JACCARD and

MERMOD, JACCARD & CO.,

have fine SUNK SECOND DIALS as above, and our name being upon them is a perpetual GUARANTEE to the wearers of these watches that we are responsible for their good performance, because, as a matter of policy, we could not AFFORD to place our NAME upon these watches if we were not CERTAIN of their GIVING COMPLETE satisfaction.

WE THEREFORE GIVE THE MOST PERFECT GUARANTEE THAT CAN BE DESIRED.

Watches!

SKILLFULLY REPAIRED

By the best workmen in the West. It is important that a GOOD Watch should be carefully repaired. We offer you the best work and at the most Reasonable Prices.

BOX-CASE, FULL ENGRAVED.

☞ IMPORTANT---The market at the present time is full of Gold Cases that are stamped and purport to be of much finer quality of gold than they really are, as, for instance, 4 and 6 kt. gold is stamped and sold as 8 and 10 kt., and 10 and 14 kt. gold is stamped and sold as 14 and 18 kt. gold, and there are even much more debasing frauds practiced than these, but we can not specify them here. Beware of buying Gold Watches that are stamped simply 14 and 18 kt., unless some responsible firm name is attached as a guarantee of its quality.

REMEMBER that every Gold and Silver Watch sold by Mermod, Jaccard & Co., Fourth and Locust streets, is the EXACT QUALITY that it is REPRESENTED to be. Also, REMEMBER that you can ORDER or BUY from Mermod, Jaccard & Co., 4th and Locust, in PERFECT confidence, as they have but ONE price, which is marked in PLAIN figures upon each article.

SPORTING SUNDRIES.

The Base Ball Record—Turf Topics—Regattas—General Gossip.

The game between the Browns and the Legion of Honor picked nine was won by the Browns by a score of 14 to 3. The picked nine played a fine game, considering the fact that it was the first time they had ever played together. James Garnean hit McGinnis for three bases and Dick Lancaster hit him for two bases.

At Providence—Providence, 2; Boston, 0.

At Philadelphia—Buffalo, 10; Philadelphia, 6.

At New York—Chicago, 11; Metropolitan, 5.

The last championship game of the season between the Browns and the Eclipse will be played this afternoon. To-day's game will decide the contest, which resulted in a tie on Tuesday. Fusselbach and Dorr will form the battery for the Browns, and Sullivan and Mullane for the Louisvilles.

RACING.

At Brighton Beach, yesterday, the first race, seven furlongs, was won by Nina; Oakdale, second; Startle, third; time, 1:30¾. The second race, seven furlongs, was won by Mamie Fields; Vexation, second; Ohio Boy, third; time, 1:31¾. The third race, one-mile and an eighth, was won by Hartford; Skylark, second; L. B. Sprague, third; time, 1:57½. The fourth race, one mile and a quarter, was won by Little Dan; Bouncer second, Charley Kempland third. Time, 2:12¾. The last race, one mile and an eighth, was won by Ballast; Malise second; Warrington third. Time, 1:57½.

The first race at Philadelphia yesterday was won by Blanchard; Tempest second, Carro Basset third; best time, 2:30¼. The race was for three-minute trotters. The second race, 2:31 class, was won by King Almont; Gen. Beamish second, Valley Boy third; best time 2:26¼.

At New York, yesterday, at the Gentlemen's Driving Park, the nursery stakes for three-year-olds was won by Alroy, in two heats. Time, 2:41¾ and 2:27¼. The latter is the fastest mile on record for an Eastern colt.

At Chicago the first contest, one and one-eighth miles, was won by Boz Sedam; Harry F. second; time, 1:57. The second race, for all ages, was won by Col. Chas. Hunt's John Davis; Bonnie Bird second; distance one mile and three-quarters. The third race, five-eighths of a mile, was won by Eva E.: Alfaretta second; Bell Boy third. Time, 1:03 and 1:06¼. The last race, a steeplechase, was won by Guy; King Dutchman second. Time, 4:12.

NOTES.

The last shoot of the Excelsior Gun Club takes place at Kinkelville to-day.

The game between the Browns and Louisvilles Monday was an exhibition game for the benefit of Ed. Cuthbert.

The six-oared barge race for the Faust cup between the Modoc and St. Louis clubs takes place at Creve Cœur this afternoon. The race will be called about 4:30.

At the Potomac River Regatta, yesterday, at Washington, the first race for junior sculls, was won by Smith of the Columbia Club. The second race, for senior singles, was won by Kenny, of the Potomac Club. The junior four-oared race was won by the Columbia crew. The senior four-oared race was won by the Columbia, and the race for light-weight fours was won by the Potomacs.

THE ALTERNATIVE.

Anti-Filleyites Declare They Will Not Touch To-Day's Nominees.

The Filley primaries were held throughout the city last night. They were more orderly than was expected, the Library Hall party keeping away in all cases. The proceedings were in most cases cut and dried. Mr. Filley was selected as a delegate from his own ward. John H. Pohlman and Peter P. Dailey are among the delegates from the Twentieth Ward. Other well known members of what the Globe-Democrat calls the "Hoodlum" party are sprinkled up and down through the delegations.

The committee appointed by the anti-Filleyites to select the date for holding their City Convention did not get through with their work at yesterday's meeting. The polling places were selected, but for some reason the date of the convention was not fixed, although it is thought it will be as late as October 18. The most important move made yesterday was the announcement of the resolution that no man who accepts a nomination from the Filley convention to-day, or who is known to be in sympathy with that body will get a nomination from the coming convention. It is announced that the committee will meet again at Gov. Fletcher's office at 4 p. m. to-morrow, when the call for the convention will be perfected and the date probably fixed.

Thomas E. White, the Labor nominee for Clerk of the Circuit Court, has withdrawn in favor of Joseph T. Bruce.

A meeting of the Congressional Committee of the Tenth District is called for to-morrow night at Central Turner Hall.

John M. Glover is now spoken of as a candidate for State Senator in the Thirtieth District.

Grace Courtland has been engaged by the Green State Central Committee to lecture through the State during the canvass.

A Novel Idea.

One of the best things yet seen in the general plan of illumination on Fourth street is the well-known Gladiator standing with forced shield at the corner of St. Charles street at the second story of the Guernsey Furniture Company. The Midas here has turned the bronzed warrior into gold, and wreathed his shapely head with gas jets, setting others about his shield and the base upon which he rests. Nothing more conspicuous or handsome has been seen in the city, and genius has been busy with plans to amuse and astonish folks. This popular house is rich in surprises at all times, and their gold-glittering Gladiator will attract and add more testimony to their enterprise.

TRIAL OF THE PROPHETS.

Two of the Veiled Prophets were charged with an offense
That, according to the Council, showed a lack of common sense,
In that, as it was stated and the evidence seemed to be,
For their "appetizers" they ignored the "O. F. C."
But, though the charge was proven, they escaped the dreaded doom,
As 'twas proved beyond a cavil they used "Carlisle" and "Hume."

We are large holders of the "Hume," "Carlisle" and "O. F. C.," in bond and free.

"BIG THURSDAY."

The Great Day of the Fair Week.

Over 100,000 People at the Fair Grounds.

The Departments--Exhibits--Awards--Arena --General Incidents.

Thursday of Fair week in St. Louis has already acquired a national reputation. It is understood that upon this day the Fair Grounds are to be crammed, jammed and packed with a struggling and seething mass of humanity which pours over the grounds and gathers in great crowds about every object of interest in the exhibition. To-day is the St. Louis day at the Fair, par excellence. The exchanges have closed; all the great wholesale houses have shut their doors; all the great retail houses have imitated their example: the factories, the foundries, the workshops and the industries have paused for a day to let the toiling thousands see the great exposition. It is the holiday of the year, and the toilers have taken the holiday. Here can be seen toilers in broadcloth side by side with toilers in jeans; here are ladies who walk in silk attire and jewels have to spare; here are ladies dressed all in calico whose jewels are like Cornelia's, their sturdy sons. Here, in a word, is everybody in St. Louis, gathered and focused at the amphitheater of the St. Louis Fair Grounds. During the fist half of the week people came here in shoals to see the Fair; to-day they come in myriads to see the crowd, and each unit hurrying in on the overburdened cars adds one more object of interest to the spectacle. Yesterday it was estimated that 75,000 people were on the ground, to-day any calculation which falls short of a hundred and twenty-five thousand must be, in the nature of things, faulty. The Fair culminates, climaxes, on Thursday. It is the day, not to see the Fair, but to see the people of St. Louis holiday making. There are not as many children here as there were on Monday, but that is the only element of the population not thoroughly represented. Even as early as 8 o'clock the car lines leading to the Fair became congested with passengers and seats were impossible to get. Every car was laden first with a prudent substratum of the wise Fair-goers who had gone many blocks to meet the vehicle and paid a double fare to ride around, next with a struggling batch of people filling the aisle and swaying to and fro by the straps and by each other; last with two platforms full of uneasy belated ones hanging on by their eyelids, and gaining the grounds only by a desperate display of energy and perseverance. The Humane Society is doing all that is possible to prevent the unnecessary torture of horses to-day, but when one one-horse car is permitted to load up with thirty-four people, averaging at least 150 pounds apiece, 4,800 pounds of human flesh, to say nothing of the car, one fails to see where the humanity comes in. Of course to-day is the pickpockets' harvest and the confidence man's garnering time. Quite a number of robberies are already reported, and it is probable that a very much larger number are not told about at all—the victims are too much ashamed of themselves. Somehow these thieves know how to pick their subjects by an intuition that is more than natural. One never hears of an opulent newspaper reporter being gone through. The bicycle race in the arena to-day has drawn out quite a number of bicyclers besides the contestants, and the people are occasionally startled by the mysterious advent of the wire steed in their midst. The weather is all that could be desired by the most captious critic, and, taking it for all in all, this is by far the most successful Thursday of all the successful Thursdays of the Fair.

The Agricultural Field.

To-day in the agricultural field the awards of premiums to traction engines are to be made. There are over thirty engines on the ground competing, and the judging committee, consisting of Messrs. C. W. Crawford, of Brazil, Indiana; Amos How of Salt Lake City, Utah, and John L. Moon, of Springfield, Illinois, will have their hands full in making the decisions. The display in the Agricultural Field is more than twice as large as last year's. There are more exhibitors and better exhibits. To indicate the appreciation with which this branch of the Fair is held by the people in interest, application for space for next year's Fair are already being made to Mr. Rumsey. Two firms which intend making a special spread in 1883 are the Studebaker Wagon Company, of South Bend, Ind., and George S. Esterly & Son, of Whitewater, Wis., the latter manufacturing binders harvesters and mowers. New buildings are to be erected by the Whitman Agricultural Company, by Deere, Mansur & Co., by Haynor & Co. and by the J. J. Case Threshing-machine Manufacturing Company, while Barr and Walters have already put up a handsome pagoda in place of the one blown down in the storm last spring. One of the features of the agricultural field is the large force of salesmen on the ground acting for the different exhibitors and selling farm machinery to the visitors. Generally this does not become a feature of the Fair until Friday, but this year the sales began on Tuesday and will be carried right along throughout the week.

The Produce Department.

There are few features of the present exposition which attract more delighted interest than the display of bees and honey. This show is one of the most thorough at the Fair. Mr. E. Armstrong, of Jerseyville, Ill., and Mr. E. F. Flanagin, of Belleville, being the principle exhibitors. Great boxes of honey are piled up all around the room, some of the sweetness still in the original comb, some expressed into a glass. The combs especially attracted attention; they were shown just as they were drawn from the hive with the honey standing within them, and the jars containing the expressed sweet were labeled with the names of the flowers from which the honey was gathered by the bees. It was thus shown that the honey drawn from white clover is essentially different in coloring from the honey of golden rods and asters, and also different in taste; the apple bloom honey has the rarest flavor and hue of all. Between them Messrs. Flanagin and Armstrong have carried away seven premiums—all that were offered in this department. In the remainder of the produce exhibit all of the premiums have now been awarded. Mrs. Jennie Taggart, of Decatur, Illinois, being the chief premium winner among the ladies, her marvelous jellies and preserves meeting with the warmest encomiums.

Sheep Department.

The two long pens immediately south of the swine sheds are filled with as interesting a line of sheep as were ever exhibited at any Fair held in the United States. The northwest corner of the first shed contains a half-dozen pens filled with merinos raised in Logan county, Ill. One magnificent ram occupies the post of honor, and is perhaps the most admired male creature on the grounds. The pens in the southeast corner of the second shed is filled with the flocks of Mr. Henry Phillips, of Detroit. The ewes exhibited are Hampshire and Shropshire Downs, all under one year. It astonishes a great many to be informed that these animals are lambs, not one of them being inferior in size to a large Newfoundland dog, and several of them are fully as high and weigh nearly as much as a good-sized heifer. The awards in the sheep department will not be completed until this evening.

Swine.

The sheds in which are exhibited the members of the pork family on exhibition at this Fair are not the foul-smelling quarters which a fastidious imagination might be disposed to paint them. On the contrary, so great is the amount of scrubbing and cleaning constantly being carried on, that the pig-pens look as neat and are as free from offensive odors as even the most delicate nerves could require. The result is that the sheds are among the popular resorts for visitors of every condition and occupation in life. The favorites with the children who swarm through the aisles are a litter of a dozen white porkers. The little animals are almost as intelligent as so many puppies and quite as friendly. The directors, superintendent and committee on awards were busy the greater part of the day in completing the list of premiums.

Awards for Sheep.

The following awards were announced this morning:

To T. W. Samuels & Son, Deatsville, Nelson county, Kentucky, first premium for rams two years and over, and second premium to J. A. Brown & Son, Decatur, Ill.

To Abner Strawn, Ottawa, Ill., first premium, and J. W. Samuels & Son second premium for yearling rams.

To Abner Strawn first premium, and J. W. Samuels & Sons second premium, for pen of three ram lambs.

To Frank Wilsen, Jackson, Mich., first premium, and Abner Stearn second premium, for pen of three ewes, two years and over.

To H. Sorby, Guelph, Ontario, Canada, first, and T. W. Samuels & Son second premium, for pen of three yearling ewes.

Awards in Mechanical Hall.

To Broderick & Bascom, first premium for twenty-five pounds best hand made hemp twine.

To Broderick & Bascom, first premuium for five coils of sash and bell cord, hand made.

To Broderick & Bascom, first premium for five reels of hemp packing yarn.

The Cotton Hall.

The cotton premium is to be given to-morrow, and the display is certainly one in which it will take experts to judge the differences. Already several hundred bales of the staple are upon the ground, and carefully selected samples are shown upon the table in the Hall. All of them are fleecy, and downy, and white as driven snow. The cotton room is one of the most tastefully decorated at the Fair, thanks to the exertions of the St. Louis Quilting Company. Quite a display of photographs are shown here, also, being Scholten's. Many of these being exceedingly pretty.

Notes.

The wiener-wurst man drives a thriving trade.

Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock was a visitor today.

Chief Campbell arrived on the grounds shortly after midday.

It is computed that 150,000 glasses of beer were drunk on the grounds to-day.

Forty-eight regular and fifteen special police officers were on the grounds to-day.

One stand, yesterday, sold over six thousand sandwiches, and not very good sandwiches either.

There will be no cotton banquet this year. Whereat there is much sadness among the factors.

In order to facilitate ingress to the grounds, a number of improvised entrances have been made to-day.

A boy named Stephen Sweeney was detected in an attempt to slip through the main entrance and promptly "bounced."

The members of the Merchants' Exchange, of whom at least a thousand are here, are making their headquarters at the Cotton Rooms.

The number of lost lunches exceeds belief. Nearly all the street gamins out here have a special objection to people with dinners.

Mr. Vanscoy, of Pontiac, was taken very sick in the cattle stalls to-day, and it was feared for some time that he would die. He was removed down town.

A reporter surprised three bootblacks behind the cow-pens making out a meal with tongue sandwiches, cold chicken, meringue pie and two quarts of champagne.

The collectors of business cards were exceedingly active to-day. One small boy had an armfull this morning, and expected to have as many more before night.

It is evident that this is more of a St. Louis day at the Fair than yesterday. On Wednesday at least four out of five faces were from the country; to-day the rule was reversed.

Something of a nuisance on the grounds is the number of organ grinders and beggars who have been admitted and make the hours dreadful by their music and their elaborate misery.

Nat Morton, one of the Mechanical Hall Committee, states that the immense crowds which fill the building from morning till night are as orderly as even the most nervous committeeman could desire.

The management of the Fair Grounds have it in contemplation to turn the geological, chemical and mineral departments into a permanent museum. This is Mr. Edwin Harrison's plan, and he is quite enthusiastic over the scheme.

John Thomas, Kirksville, Mo., lost a pocket-book containing $85 in greenbacks and a railroad pass from Quincy to Kirksville. Mr. Thomas' name is in the pocket-book. He offers a reward of $20 for the return of the book and the money.

A Mrs. Butler, of Collinsville, Ill., lost a gold watch near the Textile Hall yesterday evening. She did not know the number nor the name of the manufactnrer of the ticker and therefore her chances of recovering it are extremely slender.

The alligater pen is surrounded every day by a dense mass of inquisitive humanity. The employe in charge is exceedingly watchful to prevent children from learning too much about his sealy pets His chief means of passing the time is to chaff country visitors.

The Fine Art Hall is one of the great centers of attraction during the week. The number of well known faces in the photographic display seem to delight the crowd beyond measure, and the pictured similitudes of several well known beauties are examined with almost microscopic scrutiny.

The exhibit of Blanke & Bros. Candy Co., in Mechanical Hall, is arranged on a large pyramid in the center of the apartment. The exhibit is classed under "fruits and vegetables," but in order to afford Messrs. Blanke Bros. & Co. all the space required for their display it has been placed in Mechanical Hall. The exhibit won the blue ribbon.

A ticket-speculator named Richard Butler was run in off the sidewalk on Grand avenue this morning. He had in his possession eight admission tickets, which he was trying to sell at a small advance. He stated that he had purchased the tickets at one of the gates. The pasteboards were taken away from him and locked up in the safe at police headquarters. Their face value will be returned to him this evening if it is found that he really obtained them honestly. Butler was permitted to go.

The business of feeding the hungry has been brought to a science by the gentlemen in charge of the Excelsior Manufacturing Company's pagoda. At the hour of opening the doors a pyramid of flaky biscuits is presented to view, and although the crowds who throng into the pagoda would suffice to reduce the pyramid to the proportions of a very slender pile indeed, the corps of bakers in attendance find no difficulty in keeping the supply entirely adequate to the demand. That they could not do so with any other cooking stove than the popular Charter Oak, is an article of faith with every visitor.

At previous fairs it was the custom of Messrs. Mermod, Jaccard & Co. to include among the goods displayed by them several cases of diamonds and other precious stones. The great temptation to thieves which such exhibitions invariably invite is the great reason why the firm do not exhibit any diamonds at this Fair, but the absence of the glittering stones is not remarked, by visitors, so gorgeous is the exhibition with other and equally valuable goods. The critic who, after inspecting Mermod, Jaccard & Co.'s cases in the dry goods and carpet department, would cry for "more," would be unreasonable, indeed.

G. D. Miller is the name of an individual who has given the librarian of the Public School Library considerable trouble. Miller is connected with the New York Holstein Dairy Farm. On Tuesday morning he came to the Library and asked to see the United States Patent Office Gazette for March and July, 1882. The books were freely loaned to him for purposes of inspection in the library. Miller stated that he resided at No. 809 Olive street. Five minutes afterwards it was discovered that Miller had walked off with the books, and the librarian immediately started in pursuit. Examination revealed the fact that if there were any such number as 809 Olive street it would be over one of the doors of the new United States Custom House. Of course Miller was not found at No. 809. To-day the librarian's first assistant visited the Fair Grounds, and after some trouble unearthed Mr. Miller and recovered the books.

That the popular retail clothing firm of F. W. Humphrey & Co. has carried off every premium for each line of goods entered by them is an act of justice which commends itself to every visitor of the Fair. Never before, nor by any other house, has such a complete display of men's and boys' clothing and gentlemen's furnishing goods been made. The exhibit is contained in an immense plate-glass cabinet located near the west end of the north gallery of Mechanical Hall. It embraces an exhaustive line of full suits of every grade and quality, shirts, collars and cuffs, suspenders, overcoats, smoking-jackets, dressing-robes, etc., etc. The garment which deservedly excites the greatest admiration is a quilted dressing-gown of light, chocolate-colored silk, heavily embroidered in white silk. Every lady who passes the case exclaims her ambition to buy that gown for a Christmas present to her husband, father, brother or sweetheart. A handsome smoking cap matches the dressing gown and accompanies it. In view of the popularity of this garment, Messrs. Humphrey & Co., may anticipate a more than ordinarily large influx of intending purchasers into their well-known and extensive establishment, at the northeast corner of Fifth and Pine streets, during the fall and winter season. The polite gentleman in charge of the exhibit at the Fair Grounds states that his firm will have no difficulty in supplying every demand made for them.

Butchers' Implements.

The exhibition of Mr. Brecht in machines, knives, steels and general butchers' outfits can be seen at the Mechanical Hall and also at Machinery Hall, the most of which is his own manufacture. His butcher knives are a great attraction, with them he cuts in bones, makes cuts in iron and then cuts a paper through in the air. His manufactory is on Cass avenue, Nos. 1201 to 1211, corner of Twelfth street, of this city. He has received the first premium also this year.

WAGON MAKERS

also find an exhibit of hub-boring machines by Mr. Brecht in the same place. They are well known to wagon-makers of this city and through the West as to their durability and perfection.

The People's Day Down Town.

Following the custom of past years there was a general suspension of business to-day. The thoroughfares were deserted as on Sunday, and the only streets down town fully alive with the busy excitement of Fair week were the main boulevards Fourth, Fifth and Sixth and the streets westward to Twelfth, from Franklin and Washington avenues to Chouteau. The retail stores kept open for a few hours in the forenoon, after which the closing became general, and there was a steady movement to the Fair Grounds from every direction. For a few hours during the afternoon even the hotels and saloons were vacated, the visitors pouring in streams, by every mode of conveyance to the great center of attraction.

HOLIDAY IN THE COURTS.

Gleanings From the Federal Building—The Land Fraud Cases.

The courts and all the public departments being closed to-day, there is little to record in the line of litigation or of public business. The Post-office was closed at 10 o'clock, and the carriers only made one delivery and one collection. The mails will be made up to-night as usual. With that exception, business is entirely suspended in the Postal Department. E. M. Warfield, the superintendent of the Mail Service, was found at his desk, however. Nothing further has been heard of J. O'Connor, the absconding Postmaster of Maryville. A special officer has been detailed to work up the case.

U. S. District Attorney Bliss and his assistants, Messrs. Drummond and Smith, were found in their offices preparing for the trial of the land fraud cases in the Cleveland district. Mr. Bliss has special charge of these cases and for three weeks past has been engaged upon them. There are about eleven prominent offenders to be brought to trial at Cleveland and some of the most distinguished counsel in the country have been retained for the defense. John A. Gardner, a prominent broker of Cleveland, one of the guilty parties, who took flight to Canada when the land fraud indictments were issued, has been arrested at the house of a minister attending a camp-meeting beyond Mt. Desert. He is now awaiting trial in the Cleveland courts.

Orlando Van Hise, a real estate broker of Cleveland, is another offender who escaped to Canada and has eluded arrest up to the present. He was formerly a clerk in the Pension office here under Jas. Lindsay, the father of Robert L. Lindsay, the attorney of this city, who is now serving a ten-year sentence in the Columbus Penitentiary making barrels, the result of his conviction in the land fraud cases at Steubenville.

Mr. Bliss was asked if he would take any action with regard to the witnesses in the Wackerle insurance case. He said: "It is the province of the government authorities in the California District where the man personating William Wackerle drew his pension to prosecute in that matter. I am not prepared to say whether an indictment for perjury will issue. I have not reviewed the testimony in the Wackerle trial and cannot say whether there is sufficient weight of evidence to secure a conviction for perjury. There may be additional testimony to that offered in the case which would justify an investigation by the grand jury, but I have no knowledge at present of it."

DIRECT TRADE.

We employ no traveling salesmen. After doing business for over forty years on the system in vogue with other wholesale grocers, we abandoned it, and during the past four years have, without drumming, much more than doubled our sales, and have increased the number of our customers from 800 to 3,800. The cost of selling groceries through travelers is 2 1-2 per cent. We abolish this expense, and can sell goods at a smaller margin. Carrying the largest assortment of Staple and Fancy Groceries to be found in the Southwest, and occupying the largest wholesale grocery house in the United States, we have the ability and the disposition to offer every inducement to Country Merchants for their

RIVER NEWS.

TAKE the Mattie Belle for Naples at 4 p. m. today.

LEYHE'S Spread Eagle dashes off for Grafton at 3 p. m.

THE Commonwealth will be the Vicksburg boat for this evening.

THE Dora will be off for Clarksville at 4 p. m. Lamont master; Murphy clerk.

THE packets all brought large trips of people to-day and will go out crowded to-night.

JACK WEAVER leaves for New Orleans in a few days to go as mate on the Henry Frank.

THE Pittsburg, of the Diamond Jo Line, is announced to leave for St. Paul this evening.

THE Silas P. Coe and barges will not leave for the Ohio until Friday. C. C. Knight is her agent, L. N. Moorar, commander.

THE Anchor Line John A. Scudder arrived from New Orleans and returns South Saturday. The City of New Orleans retires temporarily.

THE river is falling, with 7 3-10 feet water by the gauge. There is five feet out to Cairo. The packets are handling very little freight this week, preferring to make their money off the passenger traffic.

"FUZZ," the Louisville correspondent of the New Orleans Democrat, writes: The new steamer S. H. Parisot has been detained somewhat in the past, owing to bad weather. It is expected that steam will be raised on her about October 10.

THE burned Robert E. Lee, the dimensions of which we have already published, had a faultless model, and was never really "let out," although she made the fastest time on record from New Orleans to the jetties. Her guards were 20 feet wide, with huge hog chains to support the huge piles of cotton intended to be carried. The main cabin was 265 feet long, with lofty ceilings, spacious halls and of magnificent and unsurpassed appearance. She was built to carry a cargo of 1,800 tons, and 7,000 bales of cotton could be easily stowed on board. She was, in all probability, the greatest boat of her day. She was officered by Wm. Campbell, master; John Stout, pilot; Robert Smith, pilot; W. L. Cannon, first clerk; John T. Hall, bill clerk; Ovid Bell, second clerk; Eugene Wells, third clerk; John Tucker, third clerk; Wm. Hines, mate; Wm. Perkins, engineer; Wm. Mestermaker, second engineer; Cardiff, carpenter; Mike Kirkpatrick, watchman; Henry S. Carnahan, steward; Theo. Washburn, barkeeper, and Julius Fohs, one of the crew.

THE New Orleans Times-Democrat of Tuesday says: The Henry Lourey, leaving Saturday, took six barges loaded with 3,047 steel rails, 278 bundles fish plates, 416 packages galvanized and 264 tons spiegeleisen. The Oakland, leaving Friday, took six barges also, containing 4,276 steel rails, 232 cases fastenings, and 1,074 bundles fish plates.... A sight that always drew a crowd to the landing Mondays—the arrival of the Robert E. Lee—will be missed to-day. All that was pleasing to the eye, beautiful from an architectural view, majestic among steamboats, hallowed for the name it bore, and valued for the service done, has vanished into flame, and will be seen no more upon the waters forever. But the name and the fame of the grand old steamer still lives, and will be treasured in the recollection as the steamboat "par excellence."....All of the surviving crew of the Robert E. Lee, except Eng. Wells, who remained on the J. M. White, and H. S. Carnahan, who stopped to spend a day with his sister, but who will be here to-day, arrived by the Jackson route yesterday..... The Ed. Richardson takes the Lee's place and will be found at the landing to-day ready for business.

A Visit to the Egyptian Fortune-Tellers.

Sample of the Clairvoyant's Work--How the Catch Phrases are Used--The Usual Tricks in Trade.

"This may be the eleventh sibyl that the world has waited for some eighteen centuries," said a gentleman yesterday whose patronage of fortune-tellers is about as well known by his friends as the fact that he gets no apparent benefit from their advice regarding business matters, however it may be with affairs of the heart. He had picked up a dodger from the pavement and buttonholed a POST-DISPATCH reporter, to whom he read: "Mme. Camille St. John, Egyptian fortune-teller and business clairvoyant. The madame is gifted with second sight and can explain the mysteries of divination and revealing the secrets of your past, present and future, assuring speedy marriages, bringing the separated together, and in business affairs her advice is invaluable." The address at the bottom was South Sixth street.

"I never heard of her," he continued, "but I can't go there to-day, because I am in that inexplainable mood which makes me nervous to look at ugly things, especially women. I'd walk a mile now just to see a pretty face and pass on. It's the only medicine—" But here a handsome woman had walked by, and in her wake followed this impetuous man of credulous nature, while the reporter turned south for a promenade out South Fifth street to see if the subject would prove a second Cassandra. A woman somewhat over medium height, dressed in garnet color, with coquettish forehead waves and neck curls, ushered him into a parlor neatly furnished in brown and hung with pictures. There was no indication of the crone he expected to see, and a glance at the young woman, who had taken a seat in the window, showed a very pretty face with gray eyes and long lashes. Probably the witch's daughter.

"Is Madame St. John in?"

"I am she."

"But I mean the fortune-teller."

"Yes; I am at your service. Please take a seat at that table in the corner," she said in a low voice, smiling at the look of doubt in her visitor's face. The table was card-size and bare, one of the oval ends having a chair either side, in which position the sybil faced her inquisitor.

"Before you announce my fate, let me ask something."

"Yes."

"Don't you find it inconvenient to be so—so unlike the other women engaged in your business, who are always wrinkled, faded or homely?" She laughed, this time, as if she rather liked the implied compliment but did not mean to encourage more of it.

"You are the first one to speak of my looks, and I don't mind saying that a great many men who come here show by their actions that they consider my appearance a surprise. Some of them go so far as to take advantage of it."

"How?"

"By attempting to seize my hand, or by speeches of gallantry, which I consider nothing but insults."

"What do you say in such a case?"

"I show him the door, and say I have no further time to spare, but my face gives him the real reason."

"Who is the loser? do you return his fee?"

"If it was paid at first I do; otherwise I refuse to accept. I frequently see these men, prominent ones, too, in business houses and offices, and learn who they are, but they don't know me or that I have seen them."

"What do you mean?"

"I never go on the street without a thick veil, which entirely conceals my features."

"So St. Louis has a veiled woman."

"It's a necessity with me. Even the few times I go the theaters I am annoyed by the recognition of some of my numerous patrons, whom I would much rather did not remember me."

"Do you show that you know them?"

"No, indeed. But we are wasting time. Give me your left hand."

This was extended gingerly that she might not feel alarmed. Madame allowed it to rest, palm-up, on the back of her left hand and held the finger-tips down with her right. She never raised her eyes from the palm, and proceeded:

"You have been married once?"

Untrue. The woman he wanted to marry refused him for an uglier man.

"She is dead now?"

Not likely, but it is probable this news would cheer her husband into a smile.

"You have two children?"

Never saw them; must be a mistake.

"Cautiousness is your greatest fault. You have a great many plans, but don't carry them out?"

Carried a man out of the office the other day on a boot sole. Had the boot on at the time. Is the fighting member of the staff, and has been presented with a club, now wainscotted in cardinal.

"Don't travel by water when you can go by land. Water is dangerous for you."

True! Always leave it alone when there's anything better to be had. Will consult the Oracle of the Holy Bottle.

"Beware of dogs."

The brutes love and follow him about instinctively. If it had been cats might have some confidence in her. Has a brindle pup to keep his feet warm in winter and eat his room clear of flies in summer.

"You were born under the planet Mercury; are inconstant, ingenious and fond of rhyming."

Wrong. Never made a line of poetry, am as regular as pay-day and can't tell a lie any one will believe.

"You will travel soon."

Afraid that is so.

"Some money is going to be left you, about which there will be trouble."

Creditors will want it, no doubt.

"Indigestion troubles you often. Be more careful about your meals."

All wrong. Never was conscious of having a digester. Could eat pebbles fried in asphaltum.

"You will be married, twice. The first woman is dark."

She has kept so thus far.

"She has met you and is already in love, but you do not suspect it. Can't you remember any such person?"

A mystery. Don't know but two here, a colored laundress and a red-haired char-woman.

"You will pay attention to another woman first, who is not suited for you. Be sure not to propose."

Not likely unless she has money enough to found a charity for two.

"There is steady good fortune in store for you; success in business and love."

Hope this remark is inspired. Hold my hand tighter—guess it is true!

"Now, I shall use the cards," said madame, apparently well satisfied with her reading of the reporter's palm, which in no case had tallied with his past or present, "and corroborate what has been said." She shuffled a deck of the Madame Lenormand fortune-telling cards, which are considerably longer and a little narrower than the playing cards. Many of them had diamond, spade, club and heart spots, a few were face cards, and the majority had double pictures, foot to foot, representing, say, a wedding scene below and above a picture of boys beating out hay with flails. Each card was numbered in ink at the top, and the sibyl said they were very hard to get in this country. She imported hers. The patent for these cards is owned by the descendants of the famous witch who invented them, and they used to realize great fortunes from it. The reporter was ordered to cut the cards three times, and then they were spread out in even rows upon the table. The same story was repeated with additions here and there which had not made themselves apparent in the operation of palmistry—two more children to the domestic scene; more money; extensive travels; told to beware of light-haired people, as they would prove treacherous; advised to cultivate greater fondness for the other sex, and so on through the well-worn list of catch phrases, and guessing from the victim's appearance and expression, until he was satisfied that her cards and ostral theory were much dearer to patrons than herself, for where it cost her but a little study of the characteristic lines in the palm it mulcted the reporter $2, and all for—well, spending an hour with a pretty woman who consented to hold his hand over one-half of that time.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

The Concordia Club will give an inaugural ball at Liederkranz Hall on Saturday evening.

The seven long-haired Sutherland Sisters and other attractive features of an exhibition at the corner of Fifth and Pine streets, this week, draw large audiences of visitors.

The popular comedian, Denman Thompson, is drawing crowded houses at the Olympic. "Josh Whitcomb," his matchless creation, has a peculiar charm for the holiday visitors.

Buffalo Bill and his company, including a band of Indians in wild songs and dances, the Fair week attraction at Pope's, fill the house to the dome at every performance. Ben Maginley will appear at Pope's next week in "A Square Man."

At the People's the Niles, Evans, Bryant & Hoey Meteor Combination provide an excellent entertainment of variety features for the visitors this week. They give place next week to M. B. Leavitt & Tony Pastor's Consolidated Troupe.

Willie Edouin's Sparks Company, in the reconstructed "Dreams; or, Fun in Bink's Photograph Gallery," furnishes a good holiday attraction at the Grand Opera-house. The sale of seats for the Aldrich and Parsloe engagement next week, in "My Partner," commenced this morning.

LIBRARY HALL.

Those who had the good fortune to be present at Mercantile Library Hall last night were most pleasingly entertained by the St. Louis Juvenile Specialty Company, who were assisted in their programme by some of the best of the adult amateurs of the city. The entertainment, which was a complimentary benefit to the two little star actresses of St. Louis—the Misses Jessie Hall and Libbie Macarty—opened with the drama of "Faint Heart Ne'er Won Fair Lady," adapted from Planche's "Vouloir C'est Pouvoir." The leading parts of the play—the Duchess of Torreneueva and Ruy Gomez—were well sustained by the two little ladies mentioned, who were very ably supported by the company. Songs and recitations by the troupe formed the main part of the balance of the programme. All of these were unusually good and were well received, especially those coming from the two small beneficiaries. A very pleasing departure from the literary character of the programme was the performance of Master Oscar Hall, St. Louis' celebrated boy contortionist and acrobat. His backbone seems to be as flexible as that of a snake; he winds himself up in the most singular shapes, and turns summersaults with amazing rapidity. He is, indeed, a genius in his specialy, as in fact are all the little ones belonging to the company. To enumerate all the clever doings of the latter would be almost impossible here. Their performances are as pleasing as are their bright and happy faces. All local theater goers are well acquainted with, and highly appreciate, the two clever little stars, as the large number of boquets last night indicated; let them now go and form the acquaintance of the remainder. To-night they will have another opportunity for so doing, since the programme will be repeated at Mercantile Library Hall at 8 o'clock. Go without fail.

MARGARET MATHER.

The sale of seats for the engagement of Miss Margaret Mather at the Olympic next week, commenced this morning. Great interest is manifested in the star career of this young and gifted lady. The following is an extract from a notice of her début in "Juliet:"

"Margaret Mather's début in Juliet Monday evening was a complete and overwhelming success. Critics and public agree about it, and, financially, there is no question of the outcome. There are only a few conservatives who claim that the lady's effort showed less depth of execution than had been expected. After the balcony scene in the second act there was not the slightest doubt that she is the coming Juliet. Neilson's place she will not fill, because Miss Mather creates her own Juliet, which will ripen into one of the most charming and winsome portrayals on the English-speaking stage."

Another Version.

An item appeared in one of the papers this morning concerning a small difficulty at the Jail yesterday between Jailor Jerry Ryan and John Hayes, a guard, which grossly misrepresents the former official. It states that Hayes requested to be allowed to attend the Republican primaries last evening, and because Ryan objected, sent in his resignation. The matter of fact is that Hayes left the jail at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and asked Ryan to let him off, which the latter refused to do, saying that the jail needed his presence. Hayes said that he would leave any way, and the jailer told him that if he did he could stay away altogether. Hayes being a day guard was off at 7 o'clock in the evening, after which hour his time was his own. The primaries did not take place until 8 o'clock, so that he had plenty of time to attend if he wished.

The Four Courts.

The Four Courts building has been devoid of any excitement to-day, the only thing relieving the monotony being the swarms of country people looking around and asking admittance to the jail. Charlie Wells, Deputy Jailor, was besieged with requests for permits to look over the prison. A tall, raw-boned specimen, accompanied by four or five women, called at the Jailor's office this morning, and asked a number of questions relative to the place. He evidently was a country magnate, and his dress indicated that he was something of a fop withal. A suit of hand-me-down clothes, the coat of which was faced with an inferior silk; a necktie of sky-blue, the ends of which laid gracefully over the lapels of his coat and a light slouch hat made up his dress. With a graceful bow he saluted the Deputy, and, hemming once or twice to clear his throat, said: "Ah, I wish to look around, and I want a special guide to show my party over the building. Of course, you have such people employed; all cities do, and I am aware that St. Louis is a very progressive town."

Mr. Wells told him that the building was wide open for inspection, but that no guides were about. The "gray" seemed taken aback, but recovering himself asked admittance to the jail.

"Come around after 11 o'clock, which is visiting hour, and you may see it, but I can't let you in now."

The country gentleman gazed at him with a look of surprise, as much as to say you don't know me, and gathering up his family, started to view the building without a "special guide."

The Pickpockets' Work.

The large number of special trains that crossed over the bridge last night going East with persons returning home from the Fair and Veiled Prophets' procession, were subjected to the work of the pickpockets. Detective Jack Hennessy, of the Indianapolis and St. Louis Railroad, said that a swarm of them stood ready to board each train as it entered East St. Louis, and crushing their way through the crowded cars nipped many a plethoric "leather" from the unsuspecting grangers, who discovered their loss only after the rascals got off the train. The Union Depot has been comparatively free from pickpockets and confidence men during this Fair and the Chief of Police is at a loss to account for it. He can attribute it to Sergeant John Burke. During the procession Tuesday night when of all other times the crooks had a better time to get in their work, they failed to do so, for but a very few losses have been reported at headquarters.

An Obstreperous Negro.

Last night at eight o'clock George Bell, a young negro employed by a man named Gillett, at No. 3414 North Tenth street, went home considerably under the influence of liquor. He held an open razor in his hand and flourished it about in a dangerous manner. Gillett grappled him and after, having a lively bout, during which the employers hand was cut with the razor, the negro was conquered and tied with a strong rope. An officer was procured and the negro sent to the Fourth District Station. He will be prosecuted for disturbance of the peace.

That Mock Auction House.

Some days ago the swindling operations of a cigar auction at No. 116 Fourth street, opposite the Planters House, were fully described in the POST-DISPATCH. But last night a reporter passing the place recognized some of the same old crowd of cappers who were present assisting in the mock purchases on the former occasion. The police should interfere to put an end to such frauds at any time, but especially at a time like this, when the city is full of strangers. The venerable doctor in spectacles is still there, having extra fine lots of the most costly brands put up and knocked down to him, leaving only a few boxes to be closed out at still lower figures to unsophisticated bystanders, and to two or three frequenters of the place who always buy liberally on the doctor's judgment, apparently buying the same box over again every time a few strangers drop in.

BABY SHOES.

How the Feet of Infants are Sometimes Tortured.

Children's Slippers and Hosiery---Stubbed Toes.

When a baby's bare foot peeps from its mystifying white draperies of linen and lace into the reveries of the unmarried man about town it acts as a disinfectant in an impure atmosphere. The moral disease germs are drawn off and replaced by the elements of that god-like emotion which transfigures the stupidest fellow who touches for the first time a tender, pink, wriggling foot patterned after his own. The mother's emotions, however, are held to earth at the outset by the practical consideration of how the foot may be suitably clothed. It was in regard to the taste displayed by St. Louis women in this matter that a shoe dealer said to a reporter last evening that the majority of mothers exhibited more vanity than judgment in the selection of shoes for their young children.

"One will bring her baby in here," he continued, "and ask me to try a pair of shoes on it that will look 'real sweet.' I know what that means, but I'm always sorry for the baby who is usually in its first short dress, and as skittish as any old maid about having its feet meddled with. I don't say that I'm going to put a shoe on it a size larger than the foot seems to be, but I do: at least I get it on as well as anyone could fit a foot operated by perpetual motion power. Then I trust to the mother's sense for results. If it's her first baby she will be indignant and say that she doesn't want the 'treasure' to 'look sloppy in its shoes.' They must fit exactly or she won't take them. I insist that the child's weight will push the foot out at least a fourth of an inch, and that the shoe is just right. If she objects again I give up and find what she wants. The foot is squeezed into a tight shoe and the baby protests by squalling. She says the seraph is teething or colicky or hasn't had its usual nap, and she shakes it up vigorously while declaring the shoes are 'just lovely,' and that its papa will be delighted. The chances are that when she wants another pair she will leave the baby at home and bring down its shoe literally burst out at the toe.

SHE WANTS SEVERAL PAIRS

to take home for trial, and I notice that the only ones I considered unsuitable are the very pair she prefers. Children would have better looking feet if they had wiser mothers, and the fault lies in the first shoes worn. One pair too short will ruin the feet, no matter how loose subsequent ones may be."

"Then some women learn your philosophy?"

"Yes, but after the little people have laid a foundation for corns and bunions. I know many children between the ages of two and three years who have both these afflictions because their mothers wanted them to look cute, as they term this phase of foot squeezing. A woman came here the other day with a little girl about five years of age. She asked to have her fit with a fashionable shoe, pointed toe and French heel, you know."

"Toothpick toes for children?"

"Not so fast. I didn't say we kept them, for we don't. The child's high-heeled shoe is not manufactured anywhere in this country, except by a Philadelphia firm which has a large South American and Mexican trade. The people in those countries won't have a SENSIBLE SHOE FOR CHILDREN.

We make a fancy-heeled shoe or slipper to order for party occasions, but keep only a few of the latter in stock. She wanted to give an order for the style desired, but I told her we would not make it. She looked whole cloud banks at me and electrified the child by her eyes as I tried on one pair after another of shoes much too tight for her. Finally she seemed suited. The child began to cry and said she couldn't walk in them. 'You shall wear them if they kill you,' was her reply, 'for I don't intend you to have ugly, spreading feet.' I couldn't resist telling her that she had said a most unmotherly thing."

"Of course she left?"

"Well, yes; and in a hurry, but I don't want such people for customers. When mothers will bring their children here regularly and let us fit them according to my best judgment they have no trouble with the feet. I have one customer, a girl of fifteen, for whom I fitted every pair of shoes she ever had. Her foot is the kind you see in marble or plaster casts, narrow, arching and slender, the toes naturally poised, free from distortions, and a foot that would have caused a sensation if exhibited at the ladies' recent swimming match in the Natatorium."

"Is there no change in the shape of children's shoes?"

"None. There can't well be, because the sole must be sufficiently broad to stand the wear and tear. Square toes are preferred to round because they allow freer development of the toes. The spring heel, which was introduced nearly two years ago, is worn as early as two years of age, and has recently become fashionable for girls in their teens. It is nothing but a slip of leather inserted between the sole and that part of the shoe pressed by the wearer's heel. It is seldom that a smaller than No. 8 is made with a regular heel, and that is on the common-sense plan, low and broad. These and the larger sizes have a higher top than has been usual for several years."

"Tell me something about baby shoes. How high are they numbered?"

"Number 4 is the first shoe out of babyhood. No. 0 has a soft sole of white kid and pasteboard, and is the successor of the little knit wool boots that are sold for babies in long dresses. No. 1, 2 and 3 have what is called the turned sole, sewed together on the wrong side and turned out. There are from four to five buttons on the side, and a black tassel is now fastened at the top in front. The latest is to have a vamp of French kid with calf uppers; or what is still better, a half-boxed round toe tipped with patent leather. This latter safeguard against the complaint of was the invention of a Fourth street firm, who alone have them for sale."

"You don't say anything about colored shoes?"

"Pink, blue or bronze with buttons to match are sold occasionally where a baby can afford several pairs at once, but black are worn now for all dress occasions. The white or cream kid is seldom bought for else than christenings or funerals. Sandal shoes are out of date. As it is necessary to support the ankle shoes are worn almost altogether instead of slippers. An ankle supporter, to be worn concealed in the shoe, was brought out some years ago. It is a piece of brown leather molded to fit the heel, extending up to the ankle-bone and almost enclosing the leg. A child troubled with weak ankles was cured by wearing one pair, but others require several. Before this was invented, and where outside appliances were objectionable, a stiffening was placed in the side of the shoe."

"AND SLIPPERS?"

"The Grecian sandal is the only new style of slipper we have had for years. It points high at the back, has a strap buttoning over the instep, a low-cut toe trimmed with a black velvet bow, and either a steel or nickel buckle. The slipper worn for the past twenty or more years, which has a piece buttoning from behind around the ankle, will always be preferred for very young babies, because they are the only slippers the fidgetty things can't kick off."

Authorities who were subsequently consulted on children's hosiery, said that the plain solid colors which can be trusted to wash, cardinal, navy blue and seal brown, are best, though the leather shades and all tints of the new colors are even more fashionable. These may be ribbed or not, to suit the taste. Stripes are no longer fashionable. Black is preferred above all for children aged four or more. The announcement by Eastern papers that black had gone out was a trick to assist merchants out of a difficulty. A few weeks ago there wasn't a black stocking to be had in the Eastern markets, and this statement was made to keep up the sales until fall importations could get to America. For those who dislike black there is the same stocking with the addition of gold and red blocks set in fence-rail rows perpendicularly. Some of the bright colors have the ankle embroidered in a contracting polka dot. The English rib is new here, and looks not over two inches wide up to within half a dozen inches of the top, where it spreads like any other stocking. The newest, however, is the stocking finished with a ribbed top similar to a sock. It requires no garter or suspender and is the most comfortable thing over the knee ever made for children.

THE GUARDS.

Something About their Campaign in Egypt.

Egyptian Correspondence London World.

"A sight for the gods is Sir Henry Havelock-Allan driving tandem with a camel and a pony in front of the Ismailia Hotel. But then Sir Henry is always a sight for the gods, whether he be instructing the Admiral in navigation, the Commander-in-Chief in the art of war or the hotel cook in the matter of potatoes. His preparations for the front are something prodigious; and when thoroughly caparisoned, with his Middle Ages helmet, and his innumerable appendages, and 'first-class dodges, my dear boy,' he is worthy of a museum. It goes without saying that he is a favorite everywhere, many a youngster at the front having to thank him for a kindly act; and he received a regular ovation from the Highlanders he used to command when he went on board the France to welcome them on arrival. It is not, however, generally credited that Sir Henry silenced one of the enemy's guns in the action at Kassassin with his rifle fire at 2,500 yards. Two camels and a Syrian ass, three horses and five men form the gallant General's cortege 'for the front.' Whenever he leaves the Hôtel Paris at Ismailia the silence of desolation falls upon the verandas of the hostelry. His martial step no longer resounds along the cemented way; his martial voice is no longer heard in directing his retainers, soothing the maitresse d' hôtel or superintending his personal laundry. Their friends at home should see the officers of the Grenadiers washing their clothes, hanging them out in the sun and sitting in the shade themselves waiting for them to dry! Lord Algernon Lennox is perhaps the best at smaller articles, but Carrington has the better of him in 'finishing' larger pieces. Col. Smith has developed an unexpected talent in the preparation of vegetables for the mess, and it is impossible to take exception to Lord Henry Russell's fire lighting.

"Stuck down in a ruined house, without rations, to make the best of it, the Guards certainly did it. Dry fragments of biscuit and pannikins of very questionable water, do not at any time form an exhilarating repast, but after a long march under the pitiless Egyptian sun, they were calculated to depress. The Guards, however, were in the best of spirits, both officers and men, and the thought that they were already well to the front made amends for all deficiencies of commissariat and transport. Those who think that Pall Mall dandies cannot rough it like soldiers are thoroughly mistaken. I have had experience of many regiments in my time, and I say it sincerely, I never saw such cheery, uncomplaining alacrity under very disagreeable circumstances before. And they do not spare the Guards either. Indeed, they have had something more than their share of fatigue duty, but they go out under the noonday sun to unload wagons or dig away a canal dam as briskly as if they were going to furnish a guard at Windsor. The rest of the army have already taken note of their soldierly conduct and are proud of the Grenadiers. Their experiences of Egypt have been many and curious. Thus, on board the Batavia, when that amiable old Cunarder got stuck in the canal, which she did about once an hour all through, Her Majesty's Grenadiers had to run backward and forward across the poop for about half an hour to send the ship rolling. If their friends in the parks could only have seen them trotting, at the word of command, starboard to port and port again to starboard, they would have wondered exceedingly. But, on the whole, it is as well perhaps, that those same friends did not see our Guards at work deepening the canal at Mahuta. Their baggage not being up, and, having only one shirt apiece, they left their shirts on the bank when they went into the water. But they kept their helmets on."

A Bootblack Hangs Himself.

From the New York Sun.

Frank Campbell, a lad of 14, had worked for two years in the barber shop of Jacob Bucky, 275 West Twenty-third street, blacking boots for customers, and doing odd jobs and chores. He earned about $8 a week, which together with the wages of his two older brothers, William and Frederick, supported their mother, who is a widow and an invalid. Frank came to the shop early this morning, apparently in the highest spirits, and whistled and sang as he put the place in order. He went down to the cellar shortly after 11 o'clock, saying that he was going to stow away some old cigar boxes which were kept there.

Ten minutes afterward a customer who went down stairs came running back with a white face. "Frank has hung himself," he cried, and then ran out after a doctor. Mr. Bucky and his assistants hurried into the cellar. It is small, and so low that a tall man cannot walk erect along the floor. The bootblack's body was hanging from a gaspipe which ran along the ceiling. The lad had made a slip noose in a piece of ordinary packing twine used to tie up the cigar boxes in the cellar, and, standing on his tip toes, had slipped it over his head. His feet were close to the floor. His pulse was still beating faintly when Mr. Bucky cut him down, but before a doctor could be found the boy was dead.

Word was sent to the brothers, and they came to the shop with their aunt. They did not dare on their return to break the news to their mother, who was lying dangerously sick. They were unable to account for the boy's strange act. It is conjectured that he may have hanged himself accidentally while making a boyish experiment to see what hanging was like, and whether he could make a slip noose that would work. The body was left lying for hours in the cellar, because no Coroner came in response to the call sent out.

A Miner's Rich Find.

From the Wall Street News.

It is related of a Black Hills miner, who had discovered a big thing, that he went to a party in Denver to have a drawing made of the site and its surroundings, and he was asked:

"Do you intend to work this mine?"

"No, I guess not."

"Will you go East and form a stock company and sell out the shares?"

"I think I will."

"Then, what you want of me is a sketch showing the mouth of your mine, with about $300,000 worth of silver ore piled up around it. When you get to Chicago you can get an artist there to put in a river, and a railroad track, and if you go as far as Boston it will be the duty of the artist there to put three steamboats on the river, two trains on the railroad, and surround your mine with a town of 600 inhabitants."

TRAVELING BY EXPRESS.

The Pleasures of It, the Wonders and the Financial Side.

From an Article in the London Times.

Everybody remembers Dr. Johnson's panegyric on the charms of a rapid journey along a good road in a post-chaise. He thought life could afford nothing better, unless it were a walk down Fleet street or unlimited tea drinking. The speed and the certainty in the absence of broken wheels, the smoothness of the highway and the alacrity of post-boys and postmasters, delighted him with a sense of perfect adjustment. It would be interesting to learn what excess of encomiums he could devise to meet the due of traveling by express were he brought back for an interval to survey this world of steam. We described on Thursday the cost of an average fast express train on an American railway. A train with a moderate complement of eight cars is appraised at £17,000. Each of the three palace cars it commonly includes has cost £3,000 at least, and not seldom £5,000 or £6,000. Whatever can minister to comfort is provided. The smoker can smoke without annoying his neighbors. The hungry and thirsty can eat and drink. The studious can buy libraries of fiction fresh from the British manufactory, only cheapened. By day the indolent repose on splendid divans. At night the tired sleep as softly as at home. Luxuries are supplied for the eye as well as the other physical and intellectual organs. If there be a fault at all, it is some redundance of magnificence. A passenger by one of these cars might, if he were reconciled to incessant locomotion, live in the midst of the most gorgeous upholstery, with a fair provision of conveniences to match, at a rate of expenditure which would barely suffice for the maintenance of a middle-class establishment in a country town. Although English railway traveling is not altogether so liberally arranged, the difference is chiefly of degree. For the solid equipments of a railway journey an English company is not less generous than an American. In some essential particulars the comparison may even be in favor of this country. Where there have been shortcomings they are being quickly made good. Passengers by one or two lines can obtain refreshments. On several lines there are Pullman cars. More than one company is commencing the experiment of imitating the United States fashion of conveying the luggage of passengers to their homes or hotels. An English first-class carriage as it is would appear a supernatural vision of ease to the mind of the eighteenth century. On all but a few lines which continue not to distinguish human beings from cattle, a wealthy gentleman of a hundred years ago spirited into an humble third-class compartment might envy the happy lot of his posterity.

The modern world is not yet at the end of its opportunities for making a common stock of its rights that it may receive a larger dividend. Towns-people in this as in other countries do not coöperate at all as harmoniously as they might in order to reap the proper gain from their necessary association. All their actual corporate advantages arise from this source. But they are entitled to more. If railway passengers were treated as municipalities treat their citizens, they would bewail their wrongs in accents beside which complaints from societies for the mutual protection of railway travelers would sound like a serenade in honor of railway chairmen. That inhabitants of cities do not derive their rightful profit from their congregation in crowds is not the result of a reluctance in the individuals to give up their personal independence. Residents in towns are naturally as docile in that respect as the majority of railway travelers. The defect comes rather from the want generally of an authority willing and competent to assume the burden and the glory of the corporate trust. Were it possible to create the same relation between a corporate authority and the residents which exists between a railway board and its passengers, the phrase of the luxuries of civilization would acquire a new significance. Railway companies build branch lines which never pay to accommodate the minutest traffic. They lavish money on the rolling stock with a munificence which more than justifies the doubt whether such sumptuous traveling can be remunerative. They are sparing neither of money nor of energy. It is, however, on one condition: they must have a competitor ready to do as much or more. Unfortunately, or, perhaps, fortunately, it is not practical to dislocate a town between two rival governments even for the sake of lapping the townspeople in the splendors of an existence made up of palace cars. Great cities must be content with an inferior scale of coöperative convenience. Still, on the most moderate computation, they do not as yet have a just return for the sacrifices they make. It is hard that, to enjoy the full benefit of acting in masses, it should be requisite to cross the ocean and pass life in traveling express from New York to Detroit.

Finery for Little Folks.

From the New York Mail and Express.

Æsthetic styles even for children seem on the wane, and the quaint little Kate Greenaway frocks, which were at first so picturesque, have become so common that French styles are generally preferred by exclusive mothers. A great many dresses in elegant materials are being made this season, and school girls and children outrival their mammas in the elegance and richness of their dresses. This style of dresses for children is always open to question, and many mothers of conventional taste prefer to array their children in simpler materials than silks and velvets, but it is the fancy of the hour to use these materials in children's dresses. A charming little French dress of ruby velvet is made with a box-pleated skirt, a plain princess effect at the waist and hips and a wide sash of surah satin where the upper part of the dress joins the kilted skirt. Another dress in dark blue velvet is finished with a deep pointed collar of fancy plaid velvet reaching down either side of the front and outlining a vest, and by cuffs and pocket flaps of velvet. The skirt of this dress is kilted and joined to the upper part by a handsome sash of dark blue and plaid velvet.

School dresses are shown in cheviot wool in subdued mixture and in dark-green and blue flannels. These dresses are usually made in some variation of the popular princess style. Dresses for older girls are made with kilted underskirts of mixed cheviot wool with a polonaise of the same pattern, with large dots. A dress of myrtle-green cheviot has an underskirt which is laid in large kilts at the back and side, while the front breadth is of dotted wool. The polonaise of this dress is of dotted goods and is jauntily buttoned diagonally and finished with square cuffs and a collar of velvet.

The prettiest outside garments for misses are of mixed-gray beaver, cut in pelisse shape, finished by a band of mixed-gray plush, which extends entirely around the garment and forms the cuffs and the collar. Simple wraps for school are of mixed cheviot in dark-green or brown, and are simply made in ulster shape or stylish havelocks. Little girls under 10 wear long cloaks which nearly conceal the dress beneath them.

The Irish Skirmishing Fund.

From a New York Special.

A number of the subscribers to the Irish Skirmishing Fund met Sunday to hear what progress the Investigating Committee had made in collecting evidence against the Executive Committee of the fund. The chairman of the committee had prepared a report, setting forth that the committee had investigated the explanation given by Mr. Rossa in connection with the "dishonored check," and also why he was short on his accounts. An explanation had been received from Mr. Rossa stating: "Before I started for Massachusetts I lodged in the Bowery bank all the subscriptions received that week, and then gave a check to Mr. Breslin for the amount. Mr. Breslin unduly delayed presentation of that check, and in the meantime Messrs. Kelly and McCrae attached the money deposited in the bank. So that when the check was ultimately presented it was dishonored." Mr. Rossa refuses to give any further explanation. The chairman wanted to know what had been done with the $92,000 publicly acknowledged to have been received. He had, he said, in his possession accounts of items representing $64,778 35 chargeable against the skirmishing fund. He had also ascertained that the amount paid for the ram, $23,345, was excessive. An expert had positively asserted that he would build a similar vessel for $8,000. Letters were then read from different persons, either condemning or upholding the action of the Executive Committee. A member of the Investigating Committee said the committee is now in possession of sufficient evidence to send the Board of Trustees to the State Prison. "Two of the members," he said, "are actually criminals. I will not publish their names now, but will give them two weeks to explain away, if they possibly can." A resolution was then passed requesting Mr. Ford, of the Irish World, to attend the next meeting and say what he knows about the fund. Prior to the adjournment of the meeting it was suggested that, as the ram could not be used as a torpedo against the British ships, it should be given to the contributors of the fund, who could raffle it among themselves.

Oh, Jimminy!

William Winter at the Grave of Shakspeare.

Night, in Stratford-on-Avon—a summer night, with large solemn stars, a cool and fragrant breeze, and the stillness of perfect rest. From this high and grassy bank I look forth across the darkened meadow and the smooth and shining river, and see the little town where it lies asleep. A few great elms near by are nodding and rustling in the wind, and once or twice a drowsy bird note floats up from the neighboring thicket that skirts the vacant, lonely road. Further off, glimmering through the treetops is the dusky spire of Trinity, keeping its sacred vigil over the dust of Shakspeare. Nothing here is changed. The same tranquil beauty as of old hallows this place; the same sense of awe and mystery broods over its silent shrines of everlasting renown. Long and weary the years have been since last I saw it; but to-night they are remembered only as a fleeting and troubled dream. Here, once more, is the highest and noblest companionship this world can give. Here, once more, is the almost visible presence of the one magician who can lift the soul out of the infinite weariness of common things, and give it strength and peace. The old time has come back, and the bloom of the heart that I thought had all faded and gone. I stroll again to the river's brink and take my place in the boat, and, trailing my hand in the dark waters of Avon, forget every grief and trouble that ever I have known.

MISSOURI MATTERS.

Carrollton supports four newspapers.

The Joplin Zinc Works will soon add two new furnaces to its present outfit.

Nearly three tons of butter have been gathered in at Springfield by the express agent.

The Joplin Foundry is crowded with work and will send to St. Louis this week for more moulders.

Jackson county is sowing 75,000 acres of wheat, the largest area she has ever put in that crop.

Joplin has another building boom and is making more brick than on any previous year of her history.

Forest, now in the Ripley County Jail for murder, is the first inmate that institution has had in a long time.

Lafayette has put in an enormous wheat crop and is shipping great quantities of apples at 75c and $1 per barrel.

The brick work on the Lebanon Opera-house is completed, and that on the Masonic Hall will be in about a week.

The City Council of Springfield are negotiating with a St. Louis man for the construction of a water-works system.

The Turpin farm, four miles southwest of Carrollton, was recently sold for $20,000, to Caspar Webber of St. Charles county.

In Boone county last week J. M. Proctor sold seventy-five yearling mules, to Abe Ellis, of Cedar township, at $91 25 per head.

Lexington Intelligencer: There is big money in feeding swine this year. Corn is comparatively low and the price of pork is at war prices.

Richmond Conservator: Stock hogs are in demand and bring fabulous prices. Somebody is going to be hurt if they don't "look a leedle out."

Land buyers from Iowa and Illinois took several thousand acres of wild land in Adair county last week at prices ranging from $8 to $15 per acre.

Cattle plague is raging in Carthage and vicinity. Steinmetz, the dairyman, has lost seven cows by the disease, and many sick cattle are reported.

Lexington Intelligencer: Mr. D. W. B. Tevis, yesterday, sold his farm of 161 acres, with stock and improvements, to Mr. Forrest Shelby, for $10,000 in cash.

Bolivar Herald: Married, on horseback in the highway, September 24, by Elder J. Robinson, Mr. Laywood Lawrence and Miss Ruth B. Alexander, all of Polk county.

The Carthage Banner has been presented with a sweet potato twenty-two inches in length, ten and a half inches around and weighing four pounds. It is of the Brazilian variety.

It is estimated that Livingston county will ship $100,000 worth of apples this fall. About 5,000 barrels have been shipped by one firm in Chillicothe, and the winter apple crop has not been touched.

Several herds of two-year-old steers changed hands in Boone county last week, 4½ and 4¾ cents, and three-year-olds at 5 cents a pound, while yearlings brought $35 and early calves $20 a head.

Sturgeon Leader: T. B. Rutledge, of near Tulip, has sold his farm to his son at $25 per acre. Wm. Ryland has sold his farm of 520 acres, mile and a half west of Sturgeon, to Mrs. Lizzie Biswell, née Miss Lizzie Street, for $12,400.

A young couple living near the State line ran away to get married, and arriving at Current River and not knowing the location of the ferry, boldly waded across. The local Chronicler is thrilled with this exhibition of "true love, all wool and a yard wide."

The total number of pupils, in the University of Missouri is 415. There are twenty-four pupils in the Medical class, and twenty-six in the department of law; 19 in the Engineering corps, and 309 in the Academic. One hundred and thirty-five of the pupils live in Boone county, and of these fifty-one are girls.

In Vandalia, Pike county, last Saturday, Miss Julia Dugan said to her little brother, who was carelessly handling an old shot-gun, "Tommy be careful, or you will shoot some of the children." Scarcely had the words passed her lips when there was a loud report, and Julia fell dead upon the floor, shot through the head.

Kidder correspondent of the Hamilton News-Graphic: Our cheese factory is booming again this season. They have shipped in the month of September 9,000 pounds of first-class cheese and 3,500 pounds of smearcase, or what some call "Dutch cheese." The latter is shipped to Lawrence, Kas., to a manufacturing company who use it in connection with straw and ingredients in the manufacture of straw lumber.

DOCTOR WHITTIER
617 St. Charles Street, St. Louis, Mo.,
A regular graduate of two medical colleges, has been longer engaged in the treatment of Chronic, Nervous, Skin and Blood Diseases than any other physician in St. Louis, as city papers show and all old residents know. Consultation at office or by mail, free and invited. A friendly talk or opinion costs nothing. When it is inconvenient to visit the city for treatment, medicine can be sent by mail or express everywhere. Curable cases guaranteed; where doubt exists it is frankly stated.

Nervous Prostration, Debility, Mental and Physical Weakness, Mercurial and other affections of Throat, Skin and Bones, Blood Impurities and Blood Poisoning, Skin Affections, Old Sores and Ulcers, Impediments to Marriage, Rheumatism, Piles. Especial attention to cases from over-worked brain. SURGICAL Cases receive Special Attention.

What is the voice of past ages regarding special practice? Herodotus, the father of history, says in Egypt 3,000 years ago, "certain individuals treated certain diseases only." He adds, "no doubt they in this copied the Assyrians of earlier ages."—[HERODOTUS, Euterpe, Section 84. HIPPOCRATES, the earliest medical scholar, plainly says the human intellect could not compass all medical knowledge, and only by treating by classes was there hope of proficiency.

TO-DAY IN AMERICA.

Austin Flint, M. D., Professor in Bellevue Medical College, New York, says in his Principles and Practice of Medicine, 1873, page 28, "the more important specialties are now recognized. Specialties result from an increase of knowledge, rendering it difficult for one mind to compass all." We say all honor to this master mind and teacher, who stands highest in pathological knowledge in this country. His works are text books in all medical colleges.

It is self-evident that a physician paying particular attention to a class of cases attains great skill, and physicians in regular practice all over the country, knowing this, frequently recommend cases to this oldest office in America, where every known appliance is resorted to, and the proved good remedies of all ages and countries are used. A whole house is used for office purposes, and all are treated with skill in a respectful manner; and knowing what to do, no experiments are made. On account of the great number of cases applying, the charges are kept low, often lower than is demanded by others. If you secure the skill and get a speedy and perfect cure, that is the important matter.

CURE YOURSELF.

Bohannan's "Vegetable Curative" cures all Nervous Diseases, Mental and Physical Weakness, General Debility, Kidney Complaints, Organic Weakness, or any of the train of evils arising from Indiscretions, Over Brain Work, OR ANY OTHER CAUSE, which often terminate in Consumption or Insanity. Many men, from the effects of Youthful Imprudence, have brought about a state of weakness that has reduced the general system so much as to induce symptoms of nearly every other disease, and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever being suspected they are doctored for everything but the right one. Notwithstanding the many valuable remedies that medical science has produced for the relief of this class of patients, none of the ordinary modes of treatment effect a cure as promptly as BOHANNAN'S VEGETABLE CURATIVE.

It has been used by old Dr. Bohannan in his private practice for over thirty years, has never failed in curing even the Worst Cases. The patient gains strength and elasticity of spirits at once, as it acts directly on the parts affected as a soothing and healing tonic and anodyne, imparting power and tone and restoring them to their natural state, the same as if never affected. The ingredients are simple productions of nature—barks, roots, herbs, etc., and are a specific for the above diseases. Permanently curing most cases in from two to seven weeks time.

☞ Price Five Dollars sent to any address. For sale only at Bohannan's Drug Store, No. 621 North Fifth Street, corner of Christy avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

☞ A Treatise fully describing the above sent FREE.

A SMART CABBY.

One More Good Anecdote About Poor Artemus Ward.

From the Reminiscences of an Old Bohemian.

Artemus Ward, the prince of humorists, positively reveled in what I think he was the first to dub a "goak." I remember, late one night in the fall of 1866, Artemus, dear little Jeff Prowse and my humble self were left alone in the club-room at Ashley's. Artemus proposed an adjournment to the Alhambra. Prowse and self joyfully assented. Artemus asked Teff to charter a cab. The vehicle soon drew up. It was a clear night, and the hotel and street lamps shed a bright light, which gave us a full view of the driver's face. He was grave and stolid-looking and evidently self-possessed. Artemus seemed to study the man's features for a brief moment; then he intimated to me in a whisper that he was going to have a lark with cabby. Assuming a grave air, which sat so marvelously well on his face, he addressed the man in slow, measured accents. "My friend," he said, "you look to me a man of thought and experience, in fact, the very man likely to decide a most important and most difficult question which has arisen between me and my friend there," pointing to Jeff, who looked slightly puzzled. "Do you take me? Will you be arbiter between us?" Cabby looked so dubious at first that I thought he was going to say "Gammon," or "Shut up," or something of the sort. However, so wondrously intent did Artemus look, and so supernaturally grave was his manner that the man's suspicions faded away from his face as snow will under a hot sun. He gave a half-grunt, then said briefly, "Fire away, Guv'nor, let's know wat's all about."

"Well," responded Artemus, with slow deliberateness, weighing every word apparently, "well, look ye here now, my friend; that gentleman there," pointing again to Jeff Powers, who, not knowing exactly how Charley might choose to compromise him with a mayhap irate Jehu, began to give slight signs of feeling rather uncomfortable, "maintains that it is the divergence of contradictory opinions, which, in the natural logical sequence of reasoning and in the inferential conclusions of argumentation, must in the final end inevitably lead to convergence and concord and harmony among people and bring about the most devoutly wished-for consummation when man to man the world all o'er shall brethren be, and a' that. I trust you follow me, my friend?" "I follow you, guv'nor; fire away," said cabby, briefly, who evidently was not quite clear yet what it all could possibly be about. "Now, you see, my good fellow," pursued Artemus, with increased intentness of face and graver ponderousness of manner and diction, "I, on the other part, assert, and I mean to stick to it too, let gainsay who may,"—with a ferocious glare our way—"that it is contrariwise and opposite, the convergence of concurrent, concordant and coincident opinions that must inevitably in its corollary and concomitant consequential train of its outcoming results, lead to divergences, difficulties and differences"—raising his voice to a higher pitch, and frantically swaying and beating the air with his outstretched right arm—"which will make one man jump at another's throat and strive to strangle him to death!" Then he proceeded more quietly—"Now, my friend, you cannot but admit that I have placed the case fairly before you. Now, please, give us your decision." Cabby, who had apparently listened with much serious attention to this rigmarole, bent his head on one side, and with one eye shut, gave Artemus the benefit of an inimitably droll look. Then he proceeded with gravity of manner equal to Ward's and still more ponderous slowness of enunciation, to deliver himself of the following oracular decision, which would have done honor to great Busby himself: "Well, Guv'nor, it is a knotty pint and a 'ard nut to crack for the likes o' me; seein' as there is a great deal to be said on both sides; and don't ye think, now, guv'nor, it's raything a dry question to settle? Vich I knowed from the first ye vos a gen'leman, hevery inch o' you, guv'nor." Having said which he looked expectant. "Sold!" cried Artemus, laughing, jumping into the vehicle followed by us. "You shall have your liquor, cabby. Drive on."

Joseph Medill in the Chicago Tribune.

"Will he bite?"

The humming of the bees as they sped from flower to flower and sipped the honeyed treasures of petal and calyx, and the low murmur of the summer breeze, sighing among the locust trees were the only sounds that broke the St. Louis silence of a beautiful afternoon in September. The amber haze of Indian summer had fallen upon the land, and from the vivid hues of the sumac bush to the pale gray of the abandoned hoopskirt every object that lay so silently upon the brown bosom of the the sun-kissed earth was touched with the withering hand of Autumn. Away to the westward stretched a vista of grain fields that were laughing in the golden glory of an abundant harvest, while the eastern landscape was flecked here and there by a sad-eyed but brindle cow.

"Let us think only of the future, Rupert," said Beryl Gillhooly to the strong-limbed, all-on-account-of-Eliza young man who stood by her side, looking down into the hazel depths of her beutiful eyes in a wistful, will-the-old-man-ever-go-to-bed expression that sat so strangely upon the Chicago outlines of his pure young face. And even while speaking these words she turned her left foot slightly so as to shield him from the ardent rays of the sun, and smiled a joyous, happy, you-are-the-first-choice-in-every-pool smile that told of the deathless passion that enslaved her soul. "Let us think of the future," she continued: "of the bright and happy future, full of matinee tickets and ice-cream."

"No, no, not that, some other future," cried Rupert McIntosh, a look of haunting horror coming into his face. "I cannot free my mind from this dread suspicion."

At that moment a book-agent was seen ascending the brow of a hill. He entered the portals of Coastcliff Castle and went up the front steps. In a little while he came back hurriedly, and soon a dog was seen at play with some gents' furnishing goods. Rupert kissed Beryl and started over town.

"When are you coming back, sweetheart?" the girl asks.

"Next August," are the words that the zephyrs beat back to her.

"Why do you wait so long, darling?"

"Because," he answers in tear-stained tones, "dogs are muzzled in August."

DR. S. B. BRITTAN says: "As a rule physicians do not by their professional methods build up the female constitution, while they seldom cure the disease to which it is always liable in our variable climate and under our imperfect civilization. Special remedies are often required to restore organic harmony and strengthen the enfeebled powers of womanhood; and for most of these we are indebted to persons outside of the medical profession. Among the very best of these remedies I assign a prominent place to Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

No Gambling at Jerome Park.

From the New York Sun.

While the crowds gathered at the opening of the fall season of the American Jockey Club at Jerome Park, yesterday, they were surprised at the immense array of policemen who were scattered about the track. They had been specially detailed to prevent pool-selling, book-making and other species of track gambling. This made the majority of the spectators very blue, but some of them managed to get in a sly bet or two despite the vigilance of the guardians of the peace. Three or four of the more daring of the book-makers openly took bets, and were promptly placed under arrest. There was no parole about the business, as the delinquents were marched off quickly. Their names were James Jackson and Henry Ulmar. Finding that backing their fancy was a perilous operation, the gamblers took seats in the grand stand or clustered in knots, discussing the situation. Pierre Lorillard was gloomy and disconsolate, while the Dwyer Brothers went about with astonishment depicted on their faces. The closing of the betting lists was a severe blow to them, for they had expected to realize a snug sum with their recent purchase, Charley B., who cost them $6,000. The fact that he landed nearly half this amount for his owners by winning the Nursery Stakes of $2,800 was completely lost sight of. It was the speculation that was sought after, and as this was not forthcoming the races fell as tame and flat as the evolutions of a squad of cavalry.

Our Great Land Navy.

Washington Special to the New York Sun.

The Board of Naval Officers convened to see what officers can be spared from shore duty on full pay have finished work. One of the members says that few changes have been recommended. Naturally, few would be expected from a board constituted like the present one. Why should they declare to the world that hundreds of their fellow naval officers are drawing pay in sinecure places for doing nothing? A naval officer is slow to acknowledge that we have too many officers for the present requirements of the service. We have, to be sure, only thirty-eight ships in commission, all told, with accommodations for eight hundred officers of every grade and description. "But," say the defenders of the naval list, "look at the various shore duties to be done." This is just what the board is supposed to have looked at, but with eyes glazed by partiality to the faults and scandals of the system.

They have pleasant shore duty on full pay themselves. They would naturally be charitable to the soft snaps of fellow officers. They are more anxious to find additional fat places for their friends than to dispossess them of the prizes they now hold. There is a popular movement in the Navy, for instance, to swallow up the revenue cutter service as they have already incorporated the coast survey. Hence, it is very unlikely that the board should find a considerable portion of the 700 shore stations now held by officers to be unnecessary.

While the Naval Board has been looking over the easy berths on the navy list, Gen. Drum has prepared a list of the army officers detailed from their regiments to special duty. This list comprises about 250 names, against 100 shore duty officers in the Navy.

Poor Pinneo.

From the Kansas City Times.

"Poor Pinneo!" This will be the exclamation of not a few readers of the Times before this item is half perused. Visitors to the Exposition Grounds last year will remember the Miss Pinneo, of Colorado, who rode a race with Miss Williams, of Kansas, and was defeated. The young woman, who left her home at Greeley, Colorado, to go out into the world and ride to fame on horseback, went to the dogs a great deal quicker than many believed she would, but it was only a question of time, others said. A Lawrence, Kan., paper is responsible for the statement. It says Miss Pinneo arrived in that city in company with one P. A. Baxter, a saloon man from Topeka. They took rooms at the hotel as man and wife, and on the following day the man had disappeared. The woman purchased strychnine at Lindley's drug store in North Lawrence, had her photograph taken, wrote a number of letters and boarded the train for Topeka. At the depot, just before entering the car, she swallowed the poison and died en route to Topeka. The particulars are meager, but the paper states that the victim was Pinneo, the woman who rode the race with Miss Williams.

The Greatest Bull Fighter.

From the London World.

The Paris boulevards have acquired another fascinating feature in the shape of a lithe, slight figure draped in brown, and generally brown all over, including the cigarette and the fingers that hold it. This is Frascuelo, the champion toreador of Madrid. The bull fighter, who is piloted by two officials of the Spanish Embassy, regards himself as quite an international celebrity. He has been overpetted in Spain. A year ago, when a bull's horn sent him to bed for three weeks, grandees and cabinet ministers called and left cards; and, a few months after, the King stopped him in the Puerto del Sol, and asked him for a personal relic to sell at the Queen's charity bazaar. The next day it was announced that Frascuelo would kill seven bulls by desire of the Queen; and the philanthropic butchery produced 600 pounds. Frascuelo is a poet in his less sanguinary moments.

WHEN a lecturer has worked the ladies of his audience so near to the weeping point that they have gotten out their handkerchiefs, and then suddenly changes his tone and speaks of the merits of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, he is bound to rouse a feeling of indignation.

Orders of Publication.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

State of Missouri, City of St. Louis—ss.
In the Circuit Court City of St. Louis,
In vacation after June Term, 1882.
Thursday, August 31, 1882.
Edward Saxey
vs.
Katie Saxey.

The plaintiff comes and files a petition herein, duly verified by affidavit, from which it appears that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Missouri, wherefore, on motion of plaintiff by attorney.

It is ordered that said defendant be notified that a civil action has been commenced against her, the object and general nature of which is to obtain a decree of divorce from the bonds of matrimony existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the grounds that the defendant has offered such indignities to plaintiff as to render his condition intolerable, and further, that she did on the 15th day of August, A. D. 1882, vacate the premises where she resided and sought other places of abode unknown to him.

And unless she appear at the term of this court to be begun and held at the city of St. Louis on the first Monday of December next, and on or before the third day thereof, answer the plaintiff's petition, the same will be taken against her as confessed.

And it is further ordered that a copy hereof be published according to law in the St. Louis POST-DISPATCH, a newspaper printed and published in the city of St. Louis.

Witness my hand and seal of the said Circuit Court City of St. Louis, this 31st day of August, 1882.

CHARLES C. CRONE, Trustee.

R. WILLIAMSON, stenographer, room 202 Granite Building, cor. 4th and Market, opposite Court-house, St. Louis.

WHEREAS the South St. Louis Railway Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri, in conformity with a resolution of the Board of Directors and under authority granted by a meeting of stockholders, as it does appear in two deeds, one dated October 8, 1878, and recorded in book 599, page 310, and the other one dated October 24, 1878, and recorded in book 601, page 206, of the St. Louis City Records, by its president and secretary, and with the corporate seal attached, did convey to the undersigned, William C. Lange, by the foregoing deeds, the following described property, etc., to-wit:

All and singular the right and privileges and franchises belonging to or hereafter to be acquired by the South St. Louis Railway Company, under the laws of the State of Missouri and the ordinances of the city of St. Louis, also its tracks of railway now laid down or hereafter to be laid down, in the city of Louis, Missouri, and all iron or steel rails, material, passenger cars, rolling stock, live stock, horses, mules, harness, equipments, and all personal property and appurtenances of said railway of whatsoever description, now owned or hereafter to be acquired by said South St. Louis Railway Company; also all real estate, whether held in fee or less tenure, within the city of St. Louis as now established by low, at present held or hereafter to be acquired by said Railway Company, and particularly one certain leasehold property now owned and described as follows:

The west half of block number fifty-nine (59), survey number three (3), of former city of Carondelet, now city block No. 3186 of the city of St. Louis, containing a front of 295 feet on east line of Second Street, running east of equal width 137 feet and 6 inches in depth to an alley 20 feet wide, bounded north by Poepping street, south by Davis street, east by said alley and west by Second street, together with all and singular the buildings, shops, stables, car-sheds, mills and offices now erected or which may hereafter be erected on any of said tracts of land or any land hereafter acquired.

Which conveyance was made in trust to secure the payment of one hundred and sixty (160) bonds of five hundred dollars each, with interest, represented by coupons attached to said bonds, at the rate of eight per cent per annum, bonds being dated October 1st, 1878, and coupons being payable semi-annually. And whereas coupons of said bonds have become due and remain due and unpaid. Now, at the request of the holder of all these bonds, and in pursuance of the terms of said deed of trust, I, the undersigned, trustee, will, on between the hours of 10 a. m. and 5 o'clock p. m. of said day, proceed to sell the above described property, together with all the privileges and franchises thereto belonging, at the eastern front door of the Court-house in the city of St. Louis, to the highest bidder, for cash, to satisfy said trust and the expenses of executing the same.

SATURDAY, THE 7TH DAY OF OCTOBER, 1882,

WILLIAM C. LANGE, Trustee.

The attention of bidders is called to a certain agreement between the South Saint Louis Railway Company, William C. Lange, representing the bondholders, and Theodore Plate, dated December 5, 1881, and recorded in book 672, page 172, of the St. Louis Records; five thousand dollars to be paid cash down at the Court-house door for bidding of said property and balance to be paid three days after the sale, when the deed will be delivered.

70T WM. C. LANGE.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given to all whom it may concern that a suit in equity has been filed in the Circuit Court of St. Louis by the South St. Louis Railway Company, and the same is now pending, against Wm. C. Lange, agent and trustee of the bonholders of said company, and other defendants. The object of said suit is to prevent a sale of the road and other property of said company advertised by said Lange, as trustee, for sale on the 7th day of October, 1882, or, in case the question cannot be heard in the courts in time to prevent said sale, then in that case to preserve the rights of the stockholders in the property unimpaired, notwithstanding the attempted sale. Due notice is filed in the Recorder's office, and whoever purchases at said sale will buy subject to the final decision by the courts of this controversy.

South St. Louis Railway Company, by HENRY W. HOUGH, J. A. ROBERTSON,
Secretary. Vice-President.

TRUSTEE'S SALE.—Whereas J. Parker Norris and Mary G., his wife, acting by and through Alex. J. P. Garesche, their attorney in fact, by their certain deed of trust dated the eighteenth day of May, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and recorded at page 251 in book 288 of records in the office of the Recorder of Deeds in the City of St. Louis in the State of Missouri, conveyed to the undersigned trustee the property in said deed described, as follows, to-wit: The one undivided sixth part of a certain lot of ground in the city of St. Louis, with the improvements thereon erected, in block number two hundred and twenty-three of the city of St. Louis, having a front of sixty feet on the east side of Lewis street, and running back eastwardly between parallel lines to the levee or river one hundred and fifty-seven feet, be the same more or less, bounded on the west by Lewis street, on the south by Smith street, on the east by the levee or river, and on the north by lot of John and William Finney, being the same property owned by Vital M. Garesche, late of St. Louis county, deceased, and the interest of the said Mary G. Norris therein, being an undivided one-sixth as one of the children of the said Vital M. Garesche, in trust to secure the payment of a certain promissory note described in said deed; and whereas said note is due and (with the interest thereon accrued since November, 1881) remains unpaid; now, therefore, at the request of the legal holder of said note and in pursuance of the provisions of said deed of trust, I will offer said property for sale, for cash, at public auction, to the highest bidder at the east front door of the Court-house, in said city of St. Louis, between the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 4 o'clock in the afternoon, on SATURDAY, THE 14TH DAY OF OCTOBER, A. D. 1882, for the purposes of said trust.

FREDERICK SAUGRAIN, Trustee.
